Another Girl.
Alcohol, Work, Love.
Marriage Is Education.
Chicago's Air Week.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE DUCHESS OF YORK has a second baby girl, no son. Between that baby, with its little head shaking, eyes that cannot yet see, trying to get used to new surroundings, and the British throne, there are only three lives.

A VIOLENT STORM raged around Glamis Castle as the little girl came into the world. There may be worse storms raging around that and other castles when she goes out. No one knows in what direction civilization is headed.

THE BRITISH, doubtless also the mother, father and royal grandparents, wished for a boy.

It is not a sound wish, for since Henry the Eighth the only two British royalties that really amounted to much in themselves were women.

Elizabeth established power in government, and Victoria established good morals in government and selected advisers that made her empire respected.

THERE COMES a dreadful surprise, after all our efforts to be good, helped by the Anti-Saloon League, Y. W. C. A. and so many other "virtue" organizations.

Dr. Eugene L. Fisk, specialist in health and vice president of the Life Extension Institute, sails for Europe leaving this message:

And, says Dr. Fisk, "It is not a bad idea to mix the three about evenly."

TO BE TOO GOOD, according to this observer, puts too much of a strain on man's nature. He quotes a philosopher who says that a wave of barbarism sweeping over civilization every five hundred years is a good thing, as it wipes out "complexes."

This will shock those who with strength of will have practiced vegetarianism, teetotalism, asceticism and other inhibitions.

MISS FANNY HURST, brilliant young creature, who once announced that she did not live with her husband all the time and took breakfast with him only occasionally, now discovers that marriages "are not made in heaven."

Marriage, says she, is a business arrangement and should be considered as such. However, genius is rarely if ever sound on the marriage question, and this young lady is a genius.

MARRIAGE IS not in the least a matter of business, it is a matter of education.

Women are gradually making men what nature did not make them—monogamist, loyal, dependable. It is hard, patient work for the women, and a severe training for the men, but eventually the thing will be done, although it may take 1,000,000 years.

YESTERDAY, SEVERAL air derbies were flying from East, South and West to the greatest of all air meetings that begins in Chicago today.

Two thousand airplanes will meet at the edge of Lake Michigan. Pilots will include men from all over the world, and from almost every city in the United States. Many women are included among fliers that will take part in the various contests.

To know what flying has accomplished, and what the human race is doing in the air, go to Chicago before the end of the coming week. The earlier the better.

GANDHI, IT is said, consents to call off his "disobedience campaign" if Britain will give "dominion status" to India, putting that 300,000,000 beehive on a plane with Canada, Australia and South Africa. This interests Britain, tired of added expense and diminished revenues.

IT INTERESTS us also. The farmer in the middle of this continent, is almost as much interested in what happens to China and India as the Chinese and Hindus themselves.

If China were eating instead of fighting and starving, if the Hindus were at peace and buying, our farmer would not be afflicted with "too much wheat, and low prices."

QUEEN HELEN of Rumania, apparently possessing common sense, decides not to remarry King Carol, who left her and their son to go rambling with another woman.

She will enter a convent, he will marry somebody else, perhaps the woman with whom he rambled.

That is the difference between man and woman. The queen might have amused herself here, where we are very hungry for royalty. She chooses a convent.

MR. GERARD, former ambassador to Germany, adds 5 to his list of men that rule the United States, increasing the 59 to 64. He adds S. Z. Mitchell, president Electric Bond and Share Company; Walter Edwin Frew, head of the Corn Exchange Bank Trust Company; Amideo P. Giannini, powerful Italian banker; William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, and Matthew Woll, another union man, to his list of 59, making 64.

SOMEWHERE IN the background stands some individual not named, perhaps the ablest among corporation lawyers, who has more influence than the 64 put together, because he tells

RACKETEERS READY TO QUIT

Ban on Dog Race Gambling And 'Hunch' Number, 805, Sound Knell of Easy Money

The North Side "numbers" barons, once the mainsprings of the entire city lottery mechanism, are "broke" today and are about ready to throw up the sponge. Although boasting of a better organization than any other district within the city limits, the racketmen apparently couldn't make a "go" of a sure-thing racket.

Many are the reasons for the failure of the lottery. The easy money gang which, it is said, included on its roster the biggest shots in the North Side's political ring, leaped from one bad hole into another. Big payoffs, cheating bookies and bad investments of their "easy money," it is said, are responsible for the fall of the mighty.

'HUNCH' NUMBER BLAMED

Although it is generally believed, and also reported that the hunch number, 805, was responsible for the "numbers" depression, the seat of North Side's financial difficulties lies deeper.

The hardest bump the North Side racketmen took was the failure of the Guyasuta dog track. The idea of the dog track was conceived by those high in the North Side "numbers" racket. The North Side pool was organized shortly before the track was built at Guyasuta, the king-pins of the lottery pooling their winnings, along with some borrowed money, to build the $75,000 dog track.

Long Skirts Change Tempo of Dance

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—The approved waltz has a smooth, wavy gliding motion because of long skirts. The steps are longer and the tempo slower. It has been adopted as a standard by the convention of the Dancing Masters of America along with the slow fox trot, the fast fox trot and the novelty dance.

Andree Neared Pole in Balloon, Log Discloses

OSLO, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Salomon-Auguste Andree, Swedish balloonist explorer who in 1897 tried to fly to the North Pole in a balloon, was believed here today to have reached a point less than 500 miles from his objective, and to have been beating back to the inhabited world when death overtook him.

Dr. S. Horn, scientist with the expedition which Aug. 8 found Andree's body and those of his two comrades, Nils Strindberg and Knut Frankel, said he did not think their balloon landed on White Island, or Hvitvoen, since there were distinct traces of the party having arrived by rowing or walking.

FIND BALLOON LOG

On the back page of the balloon's log, one of two books found in the camp with the bodies, there is the notation, "83 degrees north 32 east," with the date of entry, July 18, 1897, seven days after the start of the balloon from Dane's Island, Spitsbergen.

The position given is some distance north of the spot where the men's bodies were found, and about 475 miles from the pole itself.

Coolidge Urges Better Support for Clergy

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Aug. 23.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Few people not intimately connected with the clergy realize the additional burdens which are imposed upon that devoted profession by business depression. Being the natural repository for the troubles of the unfortunate, which strain their strength and resources for relief in ordinary times, any increase of such demands puts on them a very disproportionate share of the general distress. Yet they meet it effectively and cheerfully with little regard for the needs of themselves and their own dependents.

Calvin Coolidge

Many of us regard the clergy as a natural blessing, always serving others, never seeking their own, self-sustaining like the sun and air. This attitude makes their compensation meager and provision for old age inadequate. That is the general lot of all teaching forces. They are too little appreciated.

In every generation the clergy have furnished the spiritual leadership on which has rested both the political and economic progress of the times. They are the main source of the best standards of civilization. Without their influence the nation would fall into a state of moral and material decay. If not for their sakes, certainly for our own, we should give them more appreciation and better support,

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

TRACK STARS WAIT GUN AT STADIUM

Record-Holder Defends Title Against Great Runners; Five New Marks Set

By JESS CARVER.

Relentless warfare along the senior battle front will be waged by half a thousand of the cream of the nation's track and field stars in the Stadilm today as the annual A. A. U. championship meet swings into the second day of its three-day engagement here.

Yesterday, as the juniors put on their show in the Panther's bowl, some 50,000 more, or less, of our best citizens were conspicuous by their ABSENCE. If they remain away today in the droves they did yesterday, loud and long will be the wails of those who must peel the long green from the bankroll to finance the carnival.

Further assaults on A. A. U. records are expected to bring thrills to today's contesting and if the doing of the junior competitors yesterday may be taken as any sort of a criterion as to what to expect today, we may look for a sizeable pile of present marks being tossed into the discard.

SPRINT STARS HERE

Stars of international acclaim will perform today. A field of cinder melting chaps for the "century," headed by the official world record holder, Eddie Tolan, the Midnight Express of the University of Michigan; Hector Dyer, of Stanford University; George Simpson, the Ohio State Comet; Cy Leland, of Texas Christian; Claude Bracey, of Rice Institute; Jack Elder, of Notre Dame; Russell Sweet, of the Olympic Club; Raymond Alf, of the Denver A. JUDGE FREES 3, HITS BLUE LAW

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Judge Edwin G. Lewis rendered an opinion in Quarter Sessions Court yesterday that Malcolm McGowan and Edward Sherman, managers, and Todd Voorhees, an umpire, were not guilty of disorderly conduct for participation in a Sunday base ball game in a residential part of the city.

The defendants, charged by the police with disorderly conduct and convicted in magistrate's court, appealed. Judge Lewis held the evidence did not establish that disorderly conduct amounting to a breach of the peace had been committed and that the arrest of the defendants on Sunday, without a warrant, was unlawful.

Judge Lewis said in his opinion that while the so-called blue Sunday observance legislation of 1794 was not directly brought into the case, "yet it is inextricably involved, for the reason that since the eighteenth century in this commonwealth Sunday has been differentiated from other days of the week, and whether conduct is disorderly within the meaning of the law is to be determined not only from the nature of the acts but from the time and place of their occurrence."

The judge also said: "A law that runs counter to the habit and customs of a majority of the people whom it affects is not really a law; it is a 'bugaboo,' a scarecrow that cows only the timid and but amuses the bold."

OFFICER GIVES BLOOD TO PAL

Traffic Officer John G. Gillespie, stationed at Liberty avenue and Smithfield street, was the man picked from the entire traffic squad to try to save the life of his former pal, "Happy Joe" Williamson, who the doctors at St. Margaret's Hospital said could not live without a blood transfusion. The transfusion was made this morning.

When Assistant Police Supt. Ben Marshall made "Happy Joe's" plight known at rollcall of the traffic squad yesterday, every man raised his hand in the hope he could offer his blood to save a comrade.

A dozen huskies were dispatched to the hospital to have blood tests made and it was discovered that Gillespie's blood most nearly resembled that of "Happy Joe."

Williamson retired from the force 10 years ago after more than 25 years of service. He has been in the hospital for the last six onths.

MYSTERY HOP POINTS TO U. S.

MONTREAL, Aug. 23.—(INS.)—The inhabitants of Ivigtut, on the southern tip of Greenland, clustered eagerly today about the strange plane that slipped unexpectedly out of the sky yesterday after completing the second lap of what is believed to be an unheralded trans-Atlantic flight to the United States.

Hopping from Reykjavik on a purported return to Germany, Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau, former German naval officer, and his companions safely landed their Dornier-Wal plane at Ivigtut some nine hours later, indicating they spanned the ocean stretch at a pace of 100 miles an hour.

Secrecy surrounded the entire flight, with reports from Berlin indicating that even the homeland of the airmen knew little of their intentions. There were strong rumors, however, that the plane would soar away to North America today or Sunday.

CURTIS HERE; TO FETE DAVIS

Vice President Charles Curtis arrived here early today and was guest of honor at a breakfast in the William Penn Hotel, tendered by County Commissioner Edward V. Babcock.

Other guests included city and county officials, executives of the Chamber of Commerce, and William S. Vare and Republican City Chairman James M. Hazlett, of Philadelphia.

Mr. Vare, Philadelphia political king pin, having previously declined to comment on the nomination of Gifford Pinchot until the meeting of the Philadelphia committee this fall, had nothing to say this morning on the subject.

Hazlett, also, refused a state-

PAIR RESENT JEERING OF WOMAN, SLAIN

Husband Dies Defending Wife, Speaker at Meeting, From Jibes of Assassin

State police throughout Western Pennsylvania today were searching for Pietro Patrella, alias Petro Petreti, 35, wanted in connection with the fatal shooting of two participants at a Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration at the carnival grounds in Avella, Washington County, last night. George Harkoff, 35, of Cross Creek Township, and Stephen Mina, 40, of Avella, were shot to death at the gathering.

A dispute arose, police said, when Harkoff's wife, Anna, began addressing the meeting. She was heckled by Patrella, and Harkoff and Mina remonstrated with him. Mina, police reported, attacked Patrella with a club, and Patrella opened fire on the two men. Mina fell dead with a bullet in his heart and Harkoff with two in his head. Patrella escaped.

JEERS START ROW

There had been no demonstration scheduled to mark the anniversary of the executions of Sacco and Vanzetti, but sympathizers of the pair took advantage of a crowd attending the carnival to stage their meeting. Mrs. Harkoff, who, police say, has made several speeches at meetings of radicals, stood on a box and had drawn a crowd about her. Patrella was one of several persons who jeered the speaker.

Sergt. Frank Gleason and Pvt. John Beck, of the state police, trailed Patrella to Brownstown across the creek from the carnival grounds. They believe that he is en route to West Virginia where he formerly resided. The state troopers in company with County Detective William B. Dinsmore went to Patrella's home where they say they found Communist literature and a quantity of dynamite.

STRIKE LEADERS

During the coal strike both Mina and Harkoff were leaders in the ranks of the strikers. They had made many speeches and Mrs. Harkoff also had been active among the strikers. The Harkoff's have three children. Mina moved to Avella from Moundsville three years ago.

The Pittsburgh Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration was a quiet one. Less than 100 persons gathered in East Park, North Side, to hear speakers laud the two men on the anniversary of their executions. The speakers were Carl Hacker, secretary of the International Labor Defense, and Max Salzman, district organizer of the Communist party.

Jones View on Will Interests Mrs. Moody

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—(INS.)—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, in commenting on Bobby Jones' opinion concerning the $20,000 bequest made in her favor by the late Senator Phelan, today declared she was "interested" in so far as it was an opinion advanced by the noted golfer.

Otherwise, she said, she did not wish to comment on the legacy.

Woman Battles Painters With Water Hose

The home of S. B. Thomas, at 309 Cedarhurst street, is in the process of being painted and shingled following a paint and water battle between the workmen and Mrs. George Ellsworth, a neighbor, of 305 Cedarhurst street, last night, police said.

The painters, according to police, were determined to paint the side of the house facing Mrs. Ellsworth's. A hanging platform had scarcely been put up for the job when Mrs. Ellsworth doused the three workmen with a garden house, it was said. Arrival of police ended the battle, with Mrs. Ellsworth emerging with a coat of bright yellow paint.

The workmen had painted the three sides of the house and had asked permission to paint the other side, which faces Mrs. Ellsworth's property. Unable to get permission from the woman, the painters hung their scaffold from the cornice of the Thomas home. The painters were 12 feet from the ground when the hose was turned on them.

ENFORCEMENT BOARD REPORTED IN DESPAIR OF DRY LAW

PROHIBITION HOPELESS, IS VIEW

Hoover Commission Held Solid Against Liquor Act With Single Exception

By FRASER EDWARDS
Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—President Hoover's law-enforcement commission was reported, on reliable authority, last night to be almost unanimously of the opinion that prohibition never can be enforced effectively.

Judge William S. Kenyon of Iowa is the only member of the commission who has faith in the effective enforcibility of the prohibition law according to this authority. As a senator Kenyon was an ardent dry.

In some well-informed quarters it is said the Commission will make no specific recommendation, such as outright repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment or modification of the Volstead act or such alternatives as governmental control or state regulation of the liquor traffic.

MAY ONLY REPORT FACTS

The Commission is more likely it is said, to merely report the facts as to the success or failure of prohibition and let Congress draw its own conclusions and act accordingly.

The authority for the statement that the tendency of the Commission is opposed to the belief that the law can be enforced classified members as follows:

Wickersham, Newton D. Baker of Cleveland, Dean Roscoe Pound of Yale are rated as liberals and anti-prohibitionists. Judges Paul J. McCormick of California, Kenneth Mackintosh, of Washington and William J. Grubb of Alabama, all are set down as drys.

"OTHERS ANTI-DRY"

Dean Ada L. Comstock, of Radcliffe College is classed as a liberal and inclined to be an anti-prohibitionist.

While Frank J. Loesch, of Chicago, is said to have no radical views on prohibition, his experience with gangland crimes arising from the liquor racket might incline him toward that anti view.

If the pronounced anti-prohibition sentiment of New Orleans is any indication, Monte M. Lehman, of that city, is opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment—and, while Henry W. Anderson is a dry politically, the rapidly-changing sentiment of the country on the question may influence him to go along with a majority of the commission.

Prohibition Main Issue In Illinois Senate Fight

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 23.—(Universal)—Prohibition today was the dominant issue in the campaign for the United States senatorship to be started almost at once between Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican nominee, and Col. James Hamilton Lewis, her Democratic rival.

Urged by the Chicago and Cook County delegates to express a dripping-wet attitude, and beseeched by downstate to remain faithful to Volsteadism, the Republican state convention yesterday effected a compromise which virtually straddles the question.

In sharp contrast to that position, the Democratic state convention at its meeting here Wednesday declares the party and Col. Lewis to be "unreservedly and unqualifiedly" opposed to all prohibitory laws."

The Republican compromise seems not to have wholly pleased either group in the party ranks.

JUST WHY MR. GERARD dragged in two distinguished union labor men is not understood. They know, if Mr. Gerard doesn't, that union labor has no influence in government. The motto of politicians is: "Union labor talks between elections and votes mechanically with its party on election day."

YOU WILL NOTICE that in his list of 64, that "govern the United States," Mr. Gerard still includes no president, vice president, senator, governor, not one person elected by the people. They must be bad choosers.

IF THE PEOPLE get, as somebody said, "the kind of government they deserve," it must be that New York does not deserve much.

The other day it was shown that "racketeers" in the sale of milk levy on the consumers a tribute of more than $1,000,000 a week.

Now the state attorney reveals a "flour racket," organized to blackmail bakers and put up the price of flour. It collects only $1,050,000 a year, and is just a baby racket, at present, but will probably do better later.

ANDREE NEARED ARCTIC GOAL

to arrive there September 10, said the camp was arranged in an intelligent manner. Moccasins and other equipment found were much worn, indicating long use. Andree apparently lived the longest. Rifles and instruments were placed at his side; also there was his diary in which he wrote his last words.

48 HOURS TOO LATE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—A white haired veteran of the frozen North today told how a delay of 48 hours prevented his going on the ill-fated North Pole expedition of Salomon Auguste Andree, whose body has been found in the Arctic after a lapse of 33 years.

The man who was left behind is Capt. Evelyn Briggs Baldwin, meteorologist of the second Peary expedition in 1893 and 1894. He said he arrived at Spitzbergen two days too late to accompany Andree.

News of the finding of the body of Andree and one of his companions today sent Baldwin rushing from the Navy Department, where he does special research work in the historical division, to the boarding house in which he lives alone. He pulled out of trunks and drawers portfolios and books dealing with the Arctic and photographs, among them one of himself in the balloon shelter from which Andree started, on Dane's Island, Spitzbergen.

Looking up from the cherished data, Baldwin, now 62 years old, asserted the finding of the bodies proved what he had always contended:

"If I had not been late, the course of events might have been different."

Baldwin also said discovery of the bodies revealed he had been within 30 miles of where they were found two years after the balloonists started for the pole. At this time he was second in command of the Wellman expedition.

Andree's answer to Baldwin's letter volunteering to go with the expedition lay, yellow and carefully preserved, in his hands today. It welcomed the suggestion, but voiced fear that if Baldwin went along, the balloon basket might be crowded. Later room was provided for the American.

"I still think that if I'd got there on time, it might have been different," Baldwin added mournfully. "My weight in the basket might have affected the course of the ship."

INCOME TAX CUT LIKELY TO STAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(INS.)—President Hoover and Secretary Mellon today stood virtually committed to a continuation of the 1 per cent tax reduction froct he rates of the Revenue Act of 1928, to be applied to the incomes of 1930.

Although a high official of the Treasury had declared hope virtually was abandoned for continuation of the reduction because of the reduction feared in governmental receipts, the administration held out hopes for the tax relief.

The President said that after going over the situation with Treasury officials, he found no grounds for predictions that the cut could not be maintained. Secretary Mellon declared, in a formal statement, that he had real hopes for a continuation of the 1 per cent lower taxes.

Milon's statement was issued after Under Secretary Ogden L. Mills had talked with the President. Two hours later, the White House summary of the government's fiscal situation was forthcoming.

Inventory of the estate of the late Fire Chief Michael Shanahan, of Carsell street, was filed today. An estate totaling $23,000 was left to his widow, Mrs. Ella A. Shanahan. Of the $23,000 $16,000 was in savings accounts, and the remainder consisted of stock in the Fort Pitt Brewing Company, of which he was a director, and insurance. In event of Mrs. Shanahan's death, the estate is to be divided equally among three children. The Union Trust Company was named executor.

Andree's Sister-in-Law Here, Recalls Flight

Mrs. Clara Andree, of 132 Stratford avenue, East End, sister-in-law of Salomon-Auguste Andree, Swedish balloonist explorer, whose body was found August 8 less than 500 miles from the North Pole 33 years after he started a flight to the pole, today recalled letters her late husband had from Andree concerning the trip.

Her husband, then in the butter and egg business in Braddock, corresponded frequently with his brother about the ill-fated flight. She said:

"Although I never met Salomon-Auguste personally, Bill talked about him a lot. He was born in Sweden. My husband was born in America. If the explorer were living he would be 66 years old. His parents died here."

A number of photographs, clippings from local newspapers and letters which were preserved by Mrs. Andree when the ill-fated flight started in 1897, were destroyed in a fire which swept her home several years ago.

Evangelist's Aides Threaten To Seek Guard; Mother Revives Kidnaping Case

International News Service

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 23.—Because hundreds of motorists have been pausing in front of Aimee Semple McPherson's Malibu Beach cottage, many shouting jocular inquiries concerning the state of her health, her adherents today threatened to ask for police protection.

In addition, many of the flock from Angelus Temple have come to the beach cottage where the noted evangelist, according to her physician, is suffering a nervous breakdown. None of them have been admitted.

The choir from the temple also put in an appearance yesterday and, after singing a few hymns for the benefit of its bedridden leader departed.

BATTLE SUBSIDES

Meanwhile the battle of words between the evangelist and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, has subsided somewhat. The mother, at a Brentwood sanitarium, also has denied herself to all visitors. Her nose still is swathed in bandages. Despite denials of Mrs. McPherson, her mother insists that her nose was broken during a quarrel with her daughter.

REVIVES "KIDNAPING"

Before denying herself to visitors, Mrs. Kennedy, who said she was through with Angeles Temple affairs, revealed she had prepared a statement to be released after her death. She said it contained the history of her disagreements with her daughter, and what she thinks about the famous "kidnaping" case of 1926.

Mrs. McPherson suddenly dropped from sight, and later appeared in Arizona, saying she had been kidnaped and held prisoner in Mexico.

ment on the Philadelphia situation.

EXTENDS WELCOME

County Commissioner Babcock extended welcome to Vice President Curtis at the breakfast. Babcock stressed improvements now being made in Allegheny County and the fact that Pittsburgh was represented in the Vice President's administration by Secretary Mellon and Secretary Davis. He closed by wishing the visitor a happy trip.

Curtis later was presented a key to the city by Acting Mayor Charles A. Waldschmidt, at a public reception in the foyer of the City-County Building. An official escort conducted the vice president and other guests to the Pennsylvania Station, where they boarded a train for Sharon to take part in the home-coming celebration in honor of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis.

OPENS CAMPAIGN

The Sharon affair is viewed by politicians as the opening of Secretary Davis' campaign for United States senator, for which he was nominated May 20 in the Republican primary.

Besides Curtis and Davis, other scheduled speakers are Vare, Hazlett, Mayor Frank Gilbert, of Sharon; Samuel H. Hadley, chairman of the celebration; State Attorney General Cyrus E. Wood; State Secretary of Agriculture Charles G. Jordan, and A. Boyd Hamilton, assistant Republican state chairman.

SHARON PLAYS HOST

SHARON, Pa., Aug. 23.—Thirty-five years ago "Greenie" Davis, young steel worker, left his home here to work in the mills at Pittsburgh. Today James J. Davis, as secretary of labor under three presidents and now U. S. Senate nominee, returned to be paid a tribute by townspeople.

The program was to be featured by a celebration at Buhl Farm at 4 p. m., when both Curtis and Davis will speak. Station KDKA will broadcast the speeches.

Hundreds of noted men and women are here for the event. The Moose lodge officials will, in honor of their former chief, hold their semi-annual convention here.

A few hours after his son arrived here Thursday for an informal visit with him, David J. Davis, the Secretary's father, fell on the front porch of his home and broke his wrist. Mr. Davis was taken to Buhl Hospital. A radio was to permit him to hear the addresses by Vice President Curtis and his son today.

'One Sock' Freed, Brings Mate for Same Sentence

It might have been entitled the "missing sock," the little drama played in South Side police court today.

"Your name?" said Magistrate John J. Sweeney to John Wunschak, charged with drunkeness.

"Wunschak," replied the prisoner.

"One sock, you're discharged," said Sweeney, misinterpreting the name. "Go home and get the missing sock.."

At the close of the hearing the discharged prisoner appeared with another man in tow.

"I'm the other Wunschak," said the newcomer.

"You pair of socks may go home," said Magistrate Sweeney.

NATIONAL AIR RACES OPEN IN CHICAGO

Six Derbies Advance on City; Thrills Galore Furnished By Preliminary Maneuvers

The knights of the sky rode hundreds of jousting planes into the opening maneuvers at the Curtiss Glenview Airport, Six contest derbies advanced on Chicago.

The program provided thrills aplenty: Army, Navy and Marine Corps maneuvers; balloon bursting contests, civilian speed races, the arrival of one derby, a glider exhibition by Capt. Frank Hawks, cross-continent speedster; circus flying by Lieut. Al Williams, Navy racer, and the top-hole European aces; night flying and an anti-aircraft barrage; also an exhibition by Jimmie Doolittle in his Mystery Moth—all on the opening day.

The two-man derby from Brownsville, Tex., after an overnight set-down in East St. Louis, Ill., was scheduled to finish at Glenview in the late afternoon. John Livingston, of Aurora, Ill., had better than an hour's lead over W. G. Moore, of Kansas City.

ALL BUNCHED IN RACE

The five planes in the race from Hartford, Conn., were bunched within half an hour of each other in elapsed time at the take-off from Cleveland this morning. Verne Roberts, of Moline, Ill., was in the lead with an even five minutes' margin.

The men's Pacific Derby had safely crossed the Continental Divide, and at the takeoff this morning from Billings, Mont., to Bismarck, N. D., Nick Mamer, the Spokane Sun God flier, was in the lead—but only by three minutes. John Blum, of Seattle, was second.

Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell, of Long Beach, Cal., still led the Pacific "powder puff" race at the takeoff from Wichita, Kan., for Kansas City today.

The men's derby from Miami, Fla., was held up in Augusta, Ga., yesterday by rain, but the original schedule was resumed today.

DIXIE DERBY GOES ON

Mrs. Phoebe Omlie, of Memphis, led the women's Dixie Derby into Raleigh, N. C., yesterday—the first day out from Washington.

The opening day attendance list was a "who's who of the air." Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, explorer of the poles, arrived in time to receive the National Aeronautical Association's diploma of honorary membership at the association's banquet last night. Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, the president, made the presentation.

Eddie Rickenbacker, the American ace of aces, recalled World War experiences with Maj. Albert Ropern, of France, secretary general of the International Commission on Air Navigation. Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Department of Commerce air officials were present.

At the association banquet, Rear Admiral Byrd called for a brief silence to honor Van Lear Black, of Baltimore, publisher and air enthusiast, lost at sea several days ago during a cruise.

POOLS 'BROKE' ON NORTH SIDE

trict Attorney Park broke the track, and the "easy dough" of the lottery men was gone. They then redoubled their efforts to make the lottery pay, only to receive another jolt when the "hunch" number, 805, came through. This was a hard blow to the racketmen, given just at the time when they couldn't take it.

COULD NOT STAND IT.

They then reduced the payoff odds of their pool only to find it was the wrong balm for their financial ailment. The bookies took their trade to pools paying a larger percentage, and the "numbers" business dropped two-thirds.

With little or no money to fall back on, the North Side pool barons are waiting for another hunch number to sing the swan song of their sure-fire show.

Two Head This Way After W. Va. Holdup

Pittsburgh police today were asked to be on the lookout for two men who last night held up the West Penn Company offices at Wellsburg, W. Va. The men, said to have obtained between $500 and $1,000, were reported driving toward Pittsburgh.

PLANE CRASHES NEAR FISHER AT LEGION CELEBRATION

CROWD SEES HARRISBURG CRACK-UP

2 Airmen Injured; Governor Calms Throng; Dedicate Bridge in Vets' Honor

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 23. — (AP.) — A great crowd assembled to pay homage to the state's war heroes at the dedication of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Memorial Bridge yesterday was shocked when a tragedy of the air was enacted before their eyes.

Just after a parade of Pennsylvania National Guardsmen and hundreds of units of war veterans had marched across the half-mile span erected as a memeorial to Pennsylvanians who have given their services in time of war, an airplane, flying high over the outer edge of the crowd, went into a nosedive.

The pilot regained control for an instant, guiding it away from the stand in which sat Gov. Fisher and scores of notable personages, and then the ship smashed into the roof of the former Central High School.

BOTH INJURED

The pilot, Bernard Woutersz, of the Penn-Harris Airport, suffered a broken cheek bone and other injuries, and his passenger, Morris Bowman, of New Holland, was knocked unconscious.

The pilot extricated himself from the wreck and waved his handkerchief. Gov. Fisher, noting this act, assured those within hearing that the accident was not serious, and proceeded with the dedication ceremonies.

The injured fliers were taken to the Harrisburg Hospital.

The Governor previously had severed a red, white and blue ribbon to permit the passing of the parade across the new $4,000,000 bridge, which connects Capitol Park with the hill district of the city.

LEGION CONVENTION

The dedication was a part of the annual convention of the Department of Pennsylvania of the American Legion and many of those in the throng wore the blue trench cap of the Legion.

Selection of Easton as the 1931 convention city and nomination of candidates for state commander and election of other officers constituted the chief business of yesterday's session. Charles I. Engard, Philadelphia; Ray E. Taylor, Harrisburg; Carl C. Tintsman, Uniontown, and Leroy E. Deininger, Phoenixville, were nominated for the commandership.

Rev. W. E. Swoope, of Lebanon, was elected chaplain on the second ballot. New vice commanders elected were Robert J. Hanna, Philadelphia, for the Eastern district; Sidney Martin, West Pittston, Middle district, and George Proesl, DuBois, for the Western district.

For the office of national executive committeeman, the delegates elected Charles E. Gebert, Tamaqua, past state commander, and Miss Mary Welsh, Pittsburgh, was chosen as alternate, the first time a woman has held the post.

Among the resolutions submitted to the committee was a recommendation for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and another for repeal of the Sunday "blue laws" for the state.

'Akerson Greets Old Friends While Here

George E. Akerson, secretary to President Hoover, today is enjoying the rest and comfort of the Rolling Rock Club, Ligonier, along with Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon. Akerson spent yesterday in Pittsburgh as the guest of James Francis Burke, counsel for the Republican National Commitee. Late yesterday he drove with Burke to the club.

During his stay here, Akerson, formerly managing editor of the Minneapolis "Tribune," greeted many friends. A number were friends who knew him when he attended Allegheny College, Meadville.

DUCHESS, BABY 'DOING WELL'

GLAMIS, Scotland, Aug. 23.—A bulletin issued at Glamis Castle this morning said:

"The Duchess of York and the infant princess are both very well.

"SIR HENRY SIMSON."

As tenants of the Earl of Strathmore, father of the Duchess of York, gathered last night to celebrate the birth of a second baby princess to the "Little Duchess," the word spread over the countryside that the fete honored a "child of destiny."

There is a Scotch tradition, ancient as the good luck of a spray of heather, that a royal baby born during a storm will some day rule the nation.

The next big event at Glamis will be the naming and christening of the infant princess. The duchess is said to favor Mary as a first name, a graceful tribute to her mother-in-law, the queen.

TEXAS VOTES ON 'MA' FERGUSON

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—The fate of Miriam A. ("Ma") Ferguson's attempted political come-back was in the balance today as the state's former woman governor opposed Ross D. Sterling, Houston publisher and capitalist, for the nomination for governor in the Democratic run-off primary.

Sterling, chairman of the state highway commission, and Mrs. Ferguson, emerging from a field of 11 candidates in the first primary, last night concluded a vitriolic campaign which aroused the state.

In the tossing to and fro of personalities Sterling was aided by Gov. Dan Moody.

Memory of Peggy Blamed in Divorce

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—The memory of Peggy Hopkins Joyce was blamed for the marital unhappiness of her successor as the wife of Everett Allen Archibald, in a divorce petition filed yesterday.

Archibald, the petition complained, could never forget he was the actress' first husband and was fond of saying:

"Peggy was a better wife than you ever could be."

STORE ROBBER SHOT IN CHASE

Hospitals and physicians' offices were being watched today by police, who reported shooting one of three Negro robbers during a chase through the East End district this morning, after the three had robbed a Brushton avenue store of merchandise valued at $200.

Residents of Brushton avenue notified police that three Negroes were carting merchandise from the store of L. M. Blush at 603 Brushton avenue. The robbers had fled when Acting Capt. Frank Shine, Acting Lieut. Walter Charles and Patrolmen Edward Kilpatrick and Martin Flaherty arrived. A description of the trio was obtained and the officers began a search of the neighborhood.

The three robbers were sighted at a gasoline station at Brushton avenue and Kelly street and fled when they saw the police approaching. All four officers fired. During the chase the robber's automobile was struck several times and one of the three was seen to topple over. The robbers outdistanced the police after a chase of nearly a mile.

During the pursuit some of the stolen merchandise was tossed out of the car. Police recovered it and said some of the goods was bloodstained.

Mary Pickford Gets Her Niece Re-Named

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Mary Pickford was in court yesterday for a minute. That was just the time it took her to get what she wanted—a change of name for her adopted niece, the child of Mary's sister, Lottie Pickford.

The court approved the change of the child's name from Mary Charlotte Pickford to Gwynne Pickford. Her foster mother said the change was desired to avoid confusion.

ZUTA-LINGLE LINK BARED

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—(INS.)—Definite record of the financial dealings between Jack Zuta, murdered vice baron and gang boss, and Alfred (Jake) Lingle, racketeering reporter, was expected to be uncovered today as investigators were reported to have found the fifth of Zuta's safety deposit boxes.

The fifth cache is said to hold the gangster's fiscal records of receipts, disbursements and bribes from 1927 to a date shortly before his assassination in July. In the four boxes uncovered thus far, investigators have found records indicating that hundreds of thousands of dollars have been paid out to police and public officials for protection.

Zuta ordered the murder of Lingle, a reporter for the Chicago Tribune, investigators have ascertained. Previously, however, Zuta and Lingle were known to be on friendly terms and Lingle, it has been disclosed, accepted the gang leader's pay for protecting gambling houses through his influence with the police.

COURT ORDERS EATON QUIZZED

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—A searching cross-examination into the background of Cyrus S. Eaton's various investment companies to test his veracity and credulity as a witness in the suit against the Youngstown Sheet and Tube-Bethlehem Steel merger, which he seeks to enjoin, was authorized by Common Please Judge David Jenkins yesterday.

Attacking Eaton's good fath in opposing the Youngstown-Bethlehem deal, Newton D. Baker, pro-merger counsel, told the court:

"Eaton has said, although he has denied it, that he had other plans for Youngstown Sheet and Tube. I will prove that this company (Continental Shares) was formed to aid mergers. Eaton has aided in other mergers, and he had other plans which were thwarted by this proposed merger."

Judge Jenkins' decision in overruling the objection was based on Eaton's testimony in direct examination yesterday when he related in detail how the merger agreement with Bethlehem was negotiated without his knowledge at a time when he was working, at the direction of Sheet and Tube officers, on a merger with Inland Steel of Chicago.

It was on direct examination that Eaton denied ever making the statement that he had other plans for Sheet and Tube.

Pickpocket Steals Ingram Man's $20

W. A. Hallett, of 112 Ingram avenue, Ingram, reported to police today that a pickpocket had stolen his wallet, containing $20, while he was waiting for a street car at Penn avenue and Stanwix street last night. He discovered his loss after he boarded the car, he reported.

CITY TO SEVER CAR WIRES

NEW CASTLE, Aug. 23.—The latest development in the strife between the Pittsburgh, Butler and Harmony Railway Company came when council passed a resolution directing the city electrician to cut the company's trolley wire where it enters the city.

This action ensued after City Solicitor R. M. White told council he had been informed by David McCahill, president of the company, that it could not turn over to the city a deed for a private right-of-way or a bill of sale for its tracks until given permission by the Public Service Commission. He also told Council President McCahill had informed him the company would not turn over its poles or wire, as it intended to use them.

The dispute arose when the company rebelled against paying the share council demanded of the cost of repaving the streets it used in the city. Finally McCahill offered to abandon the city service, using buses from a point just outside, and to turn over to the city the company's private right of way.

CAR RUNS OVER SLEEPING MAN

When Philip B. Varchetti, of 52 Charter street, Rankin, decides to take a short rest again, he will be sure to pick a safe place. Varchetti stretched out on the floor of a public garage in Penn avenue, Wilkinsburg, early today. A moment later a motorist needing service drove in and ran over Varchetti.

The driver, Fred J. Klee, 1619 Brinton avenue, North Braddock, took Varchetti to the Columbia Hospital, where he was treated for bruises on the face and head. Varchetti was a member of a crew moving a steam shovel which had halted for water.

GERARD VIEW ON WOMEN EXPLAINED

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany, explained in evident embarrassment last night why he failed to include even one woman in his list of 64 rulers of America.

Telephoning from the residence of Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt at Newport, R. I., where he is a guest, the ex-embassador said:

"Let me say first that there is a widespread misunderstanding about that list. I neither asked nor desired to have it made public, and certainly I never expected that it would cause so much discussion.

"Now, about the women — I did not include a woman because the list was intended to be exclusively the foremost people in the economic life of the nation, in industry, finance, commerce and all that. I know of no woman outstanding in that field, do you?

HOW HE'D LIST THEM

"And if I were making a list of the intellectual and spiritual leaders of the nation—which, by the way, I would not attempt to do—I might well include women, but again I emphasise that this list was intended only to mention the economic leaders."

But the diplomat was caught nodding on one name and as a result Andrew Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, may be surprised to learn that he has been stricken from the Gerard list of the economic elect.

The former ambassador was asked why he passed over the name of the President of the United States and he answered promptly:

"Because I specifically omitted all public officials."

MELLON'S NAME ERROR

Reminded that he had placed Secretary Mellon's name high on the list, Gerard paused, evidently astonished, then responded:

"Oh dear, so I did, but that was a mistake. The name I intended to use was that of William, his brother—that would have kept it altogether unofficial."

He added he had heard his statements made in connection with the list had aroused some resentment in England and commented:

"Over there, I fear they miss the point. What I sought to point out was that if a nation constructs a high tariff wall, that nation should enact a Sherman law to prevent combinations in restraint of trade."

OKMULGEE, Okla., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—United States Senator W. B. Pine asserted in an address yesterday that the 64 men named by former Ambassador Gerard as those who ruled the United States are "responsible for the present business depression."

CAFE HELD UP DOWNTOWN

While his accomplice remained at the door acting as a "lookout," an armed bandit early today walked into Stouffer Lunch, Inc., at 531 Penn avenue, thrust a revolver into the woman cashier's face and stole $50.

A pedestrian, whose name was not learned by police, tripped the thug as he ran out of the restaurant. The other bandit poked a gun into the man's side and held him back until his confederate regained his feet and jumped into their machine. The bandit car then sped down Penn avenue.

The restaurant was just closing and Miss Alice Haut, of 1258 Hillsdale avenue, Dormont, the cashier, was counting the night receipts when the thug entered.

Hoovers to Hold Sunday Services in Mountains

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Sunday services are to be held at President Hoover's camp on the Rapidan in Virginia henceforth.

The President and Mrs. Hoover will attend the initial services tomorrow.

The 100 Marines, on guard there, camp attendants and guests are expected to comprise the weekly congregation.

A portable organ has been sent to the camp, and the Navy Department will designate a chaplain to conduct services.

The President came to his mountain retreat last night for another week-end of rest, recreation and informal conferences on pressing government problems.

The drought and commercial aviation have been vehicles for discussion the last two weeks, but last night the Executive surrounded himself with expert engineers to inform himself first-hand on the progress of inland waterway development and the related question of flood control.

The official guests of the President and Mrs. Hoover included Secretary Hurley, Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of Army engineers and Col. George R. Spalding, Army engineer, Robert E. McConnell, a New York engineer and close friend of the President, also was at the camp.

Lindy to Fly as Hoover's Good Will Ambassador

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(Universal)—When Col. Charles A. Lindbergh hops off on his South American flight this fall, it will be as the "good will ambassador" of President Hoover.

Announcement that the Flying Colonel would again make an extensive flight to the South followed closely upon his stay with President Hoover at the Rapidan Camp.

The flight is understood to have been discussed by President Hoover and Col. Lindbergh at that time, and to have impressed the President with its possibilities for furthering Pan American good will.

It is understood that the Colonel, flying his speedy Lockheed Sirius plane, will fly down the east coast, stopping at Pernambuco, Rio De Janeiro and Buenos Aires, then over the Andes to Santiago and up the west coast with calls at Lima, Guayaquil and Bogota.

Girl Must Marry Lost Kin To Win Fiance's Estate

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—A story of a Chicago educator who on his death bed made his fiancee promise she would marry his brother is told by police whose help the woman has asked in search for the brother.

The request was made by Miss Frances A. Weaver, 3112 State street, East St. Louis, Ill. She will receive, under the dead man's will, she said, valuable Chicago property, personal effects and some money if she marries the man who was to have been her brother-in-law. Otherwise the property goes to Cook County, Ill.

The marriage was proposed by Daniel K. Brooks, Miss Weaver's fiance, who died December 22, 1929, while a teacher in North Park College, Chicago. Brooks was a graduate of Iowa University and formerly taught high school in Bemidji, Minn. He told Miss Weaver his brother was a veterinary here.

The suit says the district in which Definbaugh lives is classed as residential under the ordinance. It is stated the signboard was erected last fall, despite the fact the defendant was notified that he was violating the ordinance. It is also charged he failed to get a building permit.

Wherever she turned for escape there were doors locked against her. None offered a way out. She was in a triangle of terror. The miracle of her escape by Love and Faith makes the crowning moment of drama in Hazel Livingston's epic story of the girl of today.

She tried to fall in Love with her husband,

Alfred Farnsworth, but she found that love cannot be counterfeited. Her husband, more than twice her age, could not share in any of her youthful impulses for gayety and novelty. What she had hoped might be true gold proved to be only fool's gold.

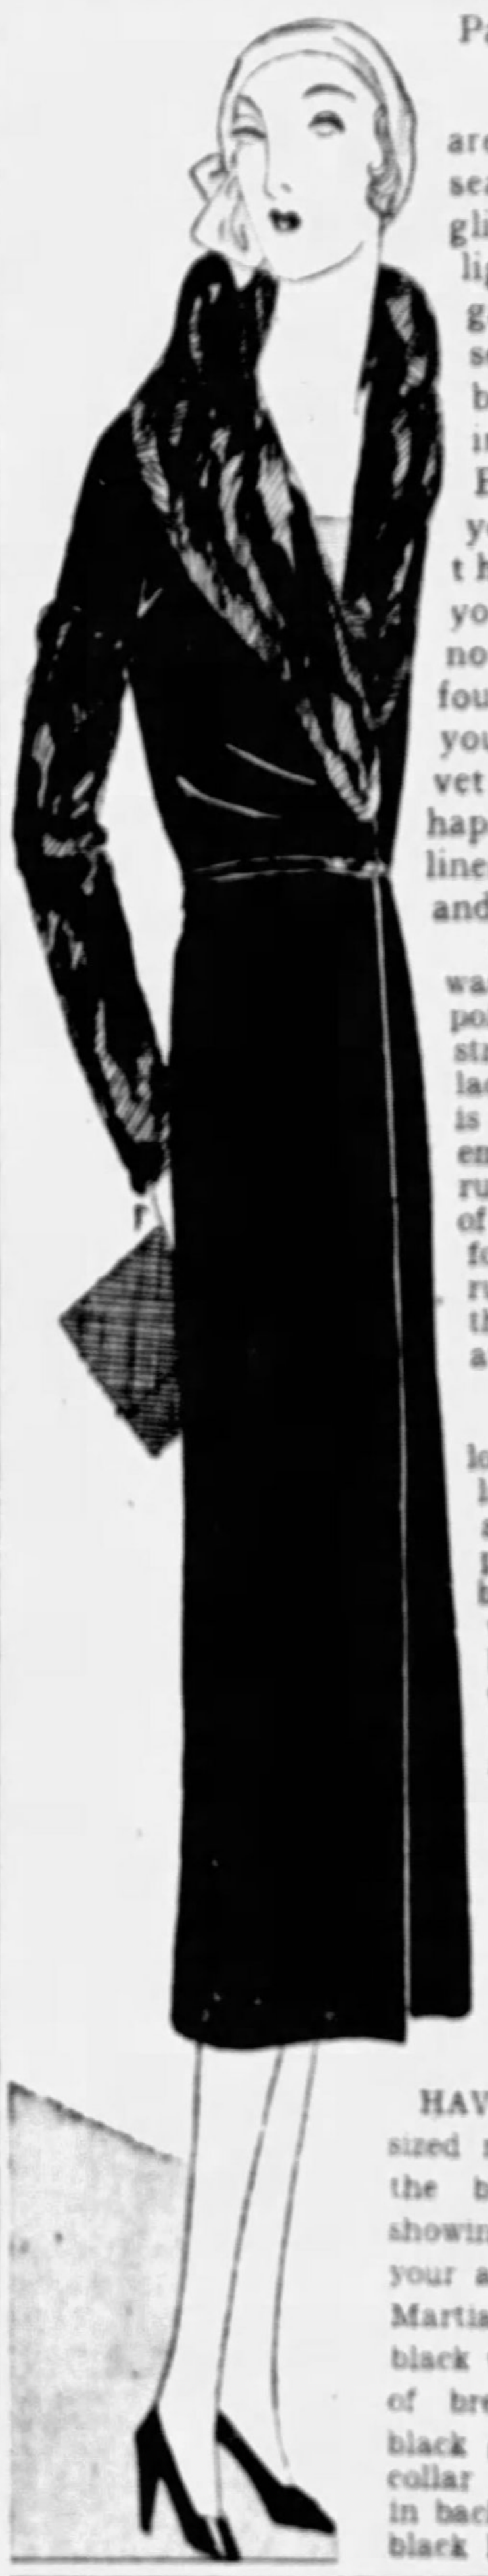
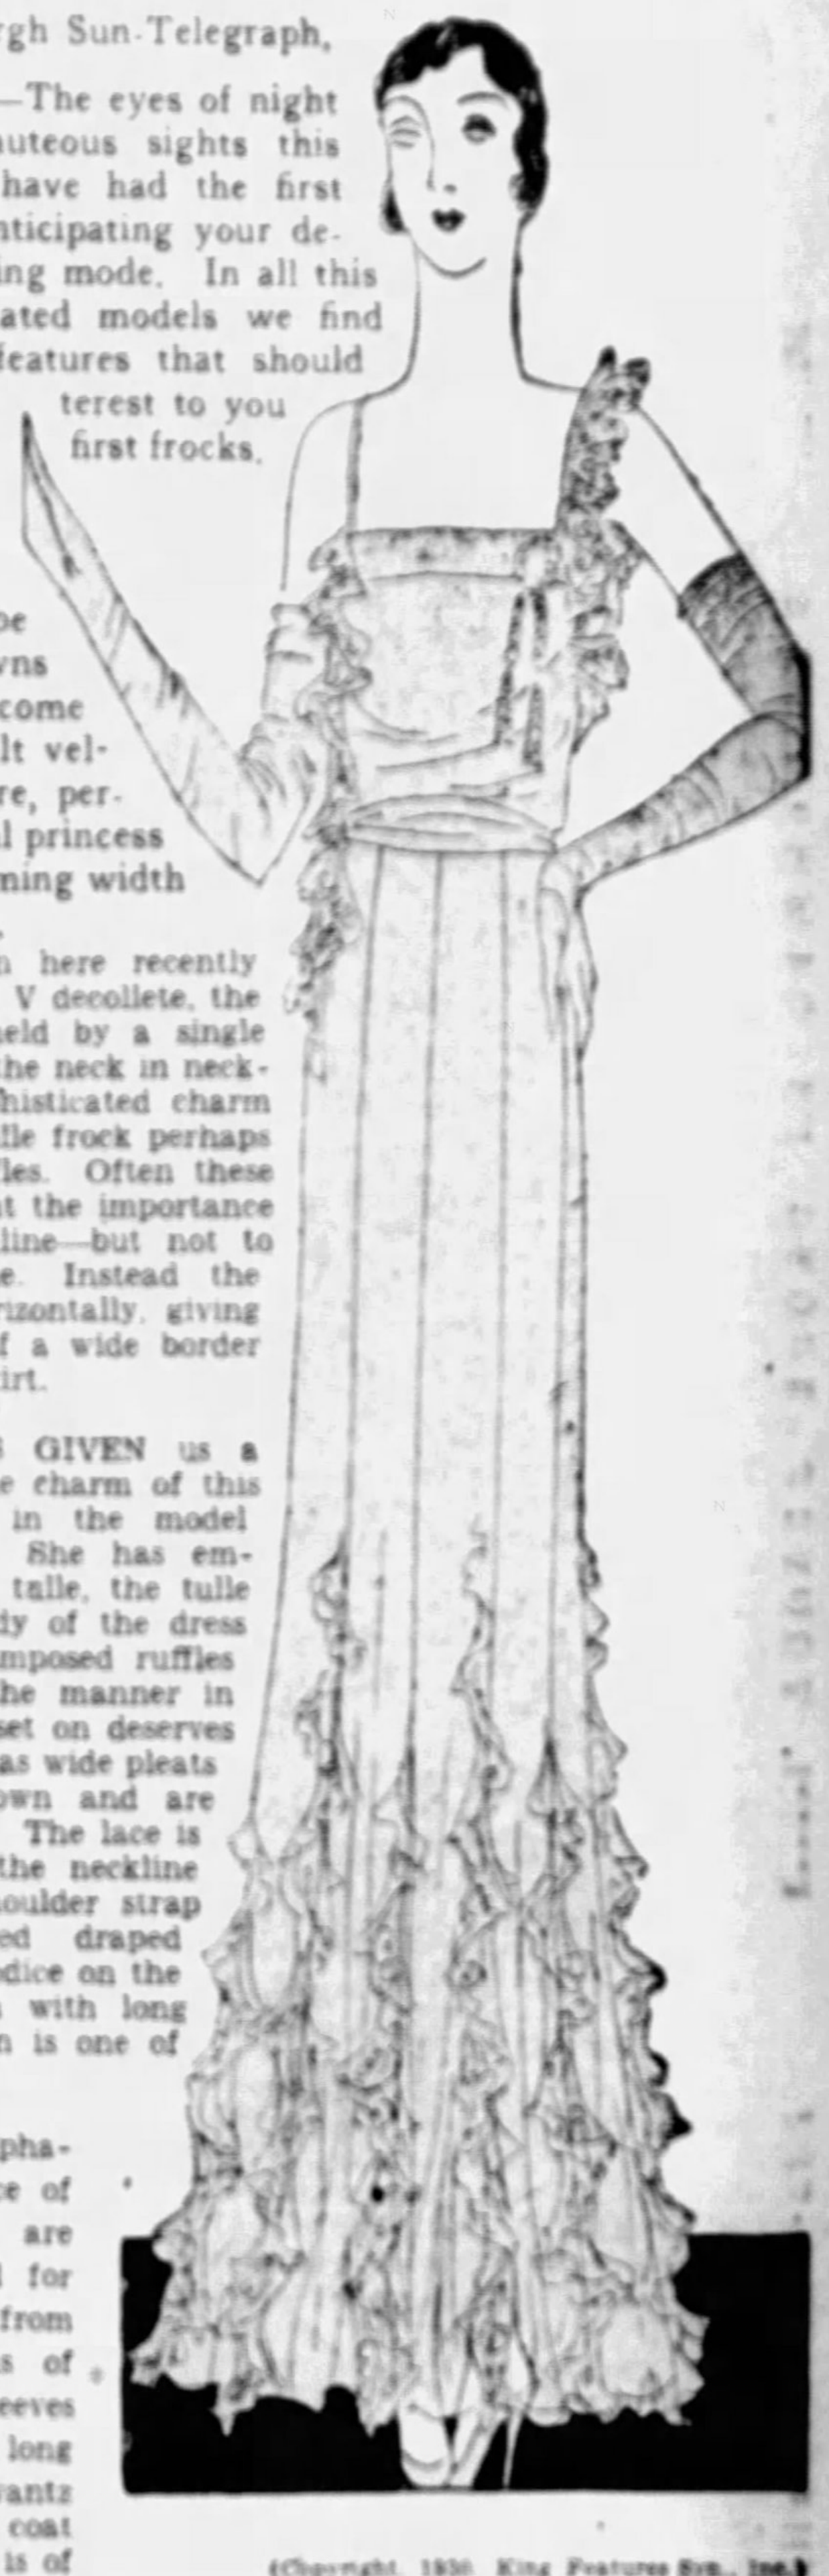
RUFFLES ADOPT A NEW LINE TO ENRICH EVENING GOWNS

—Sketched in Paris—





Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, AUG. 23.—The eyes of night are to see many beauteous sights this season and we who have had the first glimpse are already anticipating your delight in the new evening mode. In all this galaxy of newly created models we find several outstanding features that should be of paramount interest to you in selecting your first frocks. But first let us give you the good news that regardless of your type there will be not one but many gowns found to flatter and become you. There is the svelt velvet with its subtle allure, perhaps made along graceful princess lines and gradually assuming width and falling into a train.

One such model seen here recently was cut with an inverted V decollete, the point of the V being held by a single strass band that circled the neck in necklace effect. Of less sophisticated charm is the chiffon, lace or tulle frock perhaps embellished by tiny ruffles. Often these ruffles are used to accent the importance of the wide, even hemline—but not to follow its circular line. Instead the ruffles are imposed horizontally, giving the interesting effect of a wide border at the bottom of the skirt.

IRENE DANA HAS GIVEN us a lovely illustration of the charm of this latter type of frock in the model sketched here today. She has employed black lace and tulle, the tulle being used for the body of the dress with the artistically imposed ruffles being of lace. But the manner in which the ruffles are set on deserves comment. The skirt has wide pleats stitched part way down and are then edged with lace. The lace is also used to soften the neckline by developing one shoulder strap with another ruffled draped horizontally on the bodice on the opposite side. Worn with long black gloves the gown is one of consummate beauty.

HAVING ALREADY emphasized recently the importance of the black cloth coat we are showing still another model for your approval. This one is from Martial et Armand and is of black wool. Note how the sleeves of breitschwantz resemble long black gloves. The breitachwantz collar is sewed down to the coat in back and the narrow belt is of black leather.

SOLUTION TO

The Fatal Rendezvous

By ARTHUR HOERL.

Shortly thereafter the six week-end guests, Alan Knight and Mrs. Walsh were gathered in the main room. Dale stood across a table from them and beside him were Police Chief Westervelt and Prosecutor Bennett. County detectives and village policemen guarded all the exits.

"First, I'd like to explain the crime," Dale began. "It is not as mysterious as it appears. It was impossible for Jack Sharon to have been killed on the beach. To believe that we must believe in the supernatural. He was carried there after he was dead! Sharon was killed in the little cabin across the lake, and because the doors and windows were closed no one heard the shot. The murderer carried the body to the beach, wearing Sharon's shoes. After throwing him face down he took off the shoes and put them back on the dead man's feet. Then, in stocking feet, walked carefully backward, stepping only in the already-made footprints. Remember, the load that made them was the combined weight of two men . . . only one stepped into them, and with shoeless feet, on the way out. That accounts for the lack of signs.

"The murderer crossed to the cabin in a canoe and on the way back deliberately dropped the shotgun into the water, knowing it would point to someone else when it was recovered, someone who had that day bought shells.

"The killer knew who Alan Knight really was, for it was he who placed Sharon's note to Miss Knight in the lad's possession, knowing that either the lad or Mr. Milburn, who is the lady's fiance, would follow her after reading the note.

"Returning to the lodge, the murderer found still another shotgun missing. This complicated matters so when Mr. Milburn did not bring it back the killer found it and restored it next morning.

"It was a guess on my part that Mrs. Nash knew anything about the affair, but she was so agitated that I hazarded the guess. She unquestionably must have seen something, and as the killer had no other way of getting to the cabin than by canoe, because he would run into Miss Knight by land, I assumed that Mrs. Nash had seen the canoe on the lake. I believe now she saw more distinctly than she admitted to us. She knew who the guilty one was and because of that knowledge she is now dead!

"She spoke of voices in the garden. That was Mr. Warren, for he afterwards admitted as much to me. Who the lady was is of no importance. Sufficient to say, his presence in the garden directly prior to Mrs. Nash seeing the murder canoe on the lake, vindicated Mr. Warren as far as the murder was concerned.

"The man who committed the crime was one who planned carefully, who was willing to take a chance, a gambler who gambled with other people's lives as he did with their money. He gambled when he sent either Alan Knight or James Milburn to the scene of the crime, giving himself merely enough time to commit it. But their presence there was the one thing which would keep him from any suspicion! He gambled on that and almost won.

"Today I sent a telegram to my newspaper in New York. I wanted to find out whether a certain note, due by Jack Sharon at the Harvester National Bank had been paid. I received a reply that it had been paid. I had reason to believe the note was a forgery. Its payment proved that it was. The man who killed Jack Sharon had been guilty of forging his name. Before, he committed the crime he made Sharon sign a check for the amount of the note and mailed it to the bank. The murderer knew that it was his last day, on Monday the truth of his fraudulent dealings would become known. He therefore told Sharon himself, made him sign the check and then shot him to death! The man you want, sir," and he turned to Westervelt, "Is Kenneth Nash!"

Nash sprang to his feet with a snarl. The accusation left everyone for a moment spellbound. Nash was the only one to act. He drew a revolver, pointed it at Dale and pulled the triger. But there was no report.

"I emptied it, Nash, while they were unbinding you. I expected something like that." By this time Nash found himself pinioned, his own action having acknowledged his guilt.

"Rather a neat trick in the closet, Nash," Dale went on. "But you forgot one thing. You overlooked turning out the lights. Only a person who felt safe would have left them burning, and you were the only one who would have felt safe in that room. After you had locked yourself in the closet you probably remembered the lights, but it was too late then, for the key was already on the table. Rather easy, wasn't it, looping the wire around the light bracket, locking the door and then sliding the key out, pulling the wire into the closet, and then, after the key dropped to the table, using the wire to bind yourself? Hooked as it was, you only had to revolve about it, after binding your legs and gaging yourself. As you revolved about it the wirt twisted . . . clever, Nash, all except the light."

Master Mysteries

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Oliver Weadon, bank cashier, absconds with $100,000. Among the loot are five $1,000 bills. Shortly after his disappearance Weadon is found murdered. The newspapermen, with headquarters at an undertaking shop, get on the case. Robin Dale learns that one of the $1,000 bills was found on Weadon's body. The rest of the money had disappeared. Dale meets Ruth Hackett when her brother orders a casket for someone still alive! Within an hour a murder is reported at the address to which the casket is to be sent. The murdered man is Dinkie Roberts. Dale describes the killer from clues he left. Ruth suddenly appears at the murder scene and is taken to police headquarters. Dale goes along. He feels a strange interest in the girl. The bank manager identifies a second $1,000 bill found on Roberts' body. He further states Roberts drove Weadon off in a taxi. Ruth is questioned by the police. Her brother, George, is brought into headquarters on suspicion. He denies having killed Roberts. He admits he is after "Big Boy" Bradshaw because of that notorious racketeer's attentions to Ruth. Dale is falling in love with Ruth. Bradshaw learns of this. His gang sets out to take Dale for a ride. He is brought to an uptown apartment. Through a subterfuge Dale finds himself alone in a locked room with Bradshaw.

Now Go On With the Story.

CHAPTER VI.

"I know what's held you back, Bradshaw. You wonder what I have up my sleeve making a play like this. Well, I have something."

"It better be good, punk!"

"It's an ace in the hole! And say, you're not only yellow—you're a fool!"

With an ugly snarl Bradshaw drew a gat from under his coat.

"You won't shoot because my back isn't turned. I know you shot Dinkie Roberts. But that isn't my ace. This is it: I sent your men right into the hands of the waiting police downstairs and they'll be up for you. My spiel was a stall to give the police time to get here."

Bradshaw was for a moment undecided. He walked to the door, but hesitated to open it.

"Just why did you kill Dinkie Roberts?"

"Who said I did? He was a stool. . . you know what happens to stool pigeons!"

There was a knock at the door. Although Bradshaw did not know it, Robin Dale was in greater suspense than he was. It had all been a bluff, an outside chance that the police would come, that the boys at the shop would do something after he had been taken away. Bradshaw went to the door. The knock was repeated and then a voice.

"Everything all right, Big Boy? We're still waitin'!"

Dale knew then that it hadn't worked. Bradshaw told his man to wait a few more minutes. Then he turned toward Dale.

"Bluffing, eh?"

Dale never quite remembered what happened after that. There was a terrific struggle . . . Bradshaw was tough . . . for a while it looked as if Dale didn't have a chance . . . then, just as the last of his strength was ebbing the door was battered down and O'Reilly—good old Dan—came rushing in with a squad of blue-coated policemen at his heels.

They found Bradshaw pretty well spent when they grabbed him. No fight was left in the Big Boy. Then followed a hurried search of the apartment. They discovered a strange bit of evidence which they took back to the station with Bradshaw.

Capt. Morgan sat at his desk and looked over the bit of evidence Sergt. Owens had picked up at Bradshaw's apartment. Robin Dale was standing near the desk. Capt. Morgan handed him the evidence. It was a note, another note from Weadon. . . these written words were like a voice from the grave . . . and with the letter another $1,000 bill!"

Dale read the note. "Dear Bradshaw, Here is the last I owe you. I'm leaving today for good. One thing I believe you should know. Dinkie Roberts is in the employ of the police. I only found this out today. You've been decent to me so I wanted to put you on your guard. Oliver Weadon."

It was becoming more of a complicated puzzle as one after another of these fatal $1,000 bills came to light. Dale studied the message for several minutes. Then he looked at the banknote.

"There's still something missing in this whole affair, captain, . . . something to tie all these strange clues together. There doesn't seem to be anything tangible to link them. When you find the missing link it will all be clear. But it's vague now, awful vague."

"For you, Dale."

Robin Dale, puzzled, took the telephone. At the first words he heard his face brightened.

"Is that you, Robin? I'm so glad . . . I heard what had happened. I was frantic!"

"I'm all right now, dear . . ."

"There's something else, Robin . . . I know what happened to Mr. Weadon. It was," . . . her voice ended with a horrifying shriek. Then there was a dull thud in Dale's receiver, the sound of a phone dropping to the floor. He jingled the holder franctically. But there was no reply.

"It was Ruth Hackett . . . she knows who killed Weadon. She was about to tell me when something happened; I'm going right over."

"Owens! Go along with Dale!"

Robin Dale was already rushing headlong from the office. Outside O'Reilly and Lippman were waiting. They succeeded in keeping pace with Dale but Owens was outdistanced.

Robin Dale and the two reporters arrived at Ruth's modest little apartment. They found the door open. Dale rushed in. The sight which greeted his eyes was one that he will probably carry to his last day. It probably proved to be the turning point in Robin Dale's life . . .

Ruth lay upon the couch, her arm hanging listlessly toward the floor. There were signs of a frantic struggle. Dale rushed to her side. He talked to her, hysterically then gently, then in anguish. She made no reply. The marks of fiendish hands were still upon her throat. For a long while Dale remained there on his knees. Reverently he bent over and touched his lips to her cheek. He wiped his eyes and stood up, straight and stern and grim.

"She's dead."

He looked down at her small white hand. He lifted it and gently opened the clasped fingers. Within her palms he found the halves of two $1,000 bills.

Dale walked to the table. Neither O'Reilly nor Lippman intruded upon his thoughts. For 15 minutes he stood there, scarcely moving. Finally he turned to his friends.

"I never hated criminals before—but, from this hour on not one that I shall have the power to punish will escape! I know now who is responsible for this. I'm going out to get him tonight. No—I'm going alone. I want you to stay and take care of—of Ruth."

Dale straightened, the grimness on his face deepened. With firm, hurried steps he walked toward the door.

(Who was Robin Dale going to get? What made him sure that he was right? Who killed Weadon? Who killed Ruth Hackett?, What were the motives for the crimes? What was the missing link in the Weadon Case? (Read the solution in the Sun-Telegraph a week from today.)

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

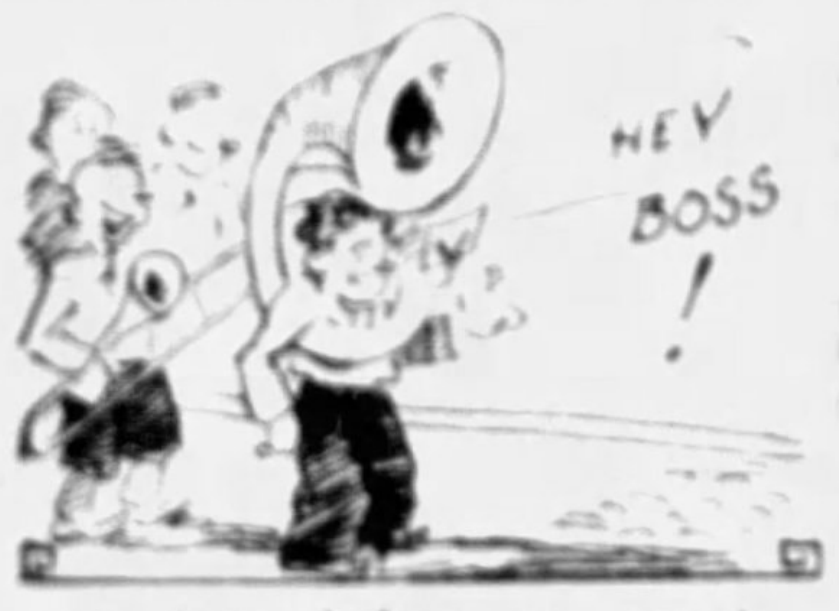
To his friends in Sharon, his home town, Jim Davis is not Senator nor is he Secretary of Labor. They call him "Greeny," a nickname he boasted while he played the clarinet in the Sharon Citizens Band many years ago. Today in Sharon his friends are going to do him honor and the band will reassemble for the occasion. Indeed, there will be a clarinet on hand in case the Senate nominee cares to indulge in a tune or two.

* * *

If the Secretary feels like telling a story today we suggest he relate the experience of his good friend Tom Petrini. Tom and Greeny played side by side in the old Citizens Band. Years ago Tom felt that there was a need for a junior band in Sharon. He organized one whose membership seemed to represent every nationality. Tom finally obtained an engagement for the band's first public appearance at a big celebration on July 4.

The band assembled on the Fourth and Tom was proud.

"Now boys," he suggested, "we'll just play a little warm-up tune before we march down to the stand. Let's hit the beginners' march."



The band played the beginners' march.

"Hey, boss," cried out Tony, the young horn player, "I justa played dis."

To see it now you wouldn't believe us but 50 years ago Fulton street on the Hill was one of Pittsburgh's most exclusive residential streets.

TAHOE TAVERN, Cal., Aug. 23.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Well, the poor Duchess of York's baby arrived, nothing but a girl. I tell you there is an awful lot expected of you when you marry royalty. That will be a terrible blow to the Prince of Wales, for he has been having such a good time. Well, if he is really in the market for a wife, right here where we are at Reno are 2,000 of 'em getting ready to meet all comers. If they can't get a royal male heir over there any other way, we will lean 'em Lindy's baby. Then my old friend Henry Mencken is getting married, so we will be all set here.

Yours, WILL.

Extra Route Remains Way To Film Stardom for 20 Out of 17,000

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 23.

Despite the influx of stage people, Hollywood studios are still picking potential stars from among the 17,000 extras listed at the Central Casting Bureau.

Within the past year, more than 20 extras have graduated to the estate of contract players at the various studios.

One of the outstanding examples is Frances Dee, who did dress atmosphere until Paramount suddenly recognized her possibilities and signed her to a five-year contract. Her first role was the lead opposite Maurice Chevalier and her second a lead opposite Charles Rogers. All the other studios in Hollywood are bemoaning the fact that they did not pick her from from the crowd.

Maurice Chevalier

Rita Leroy is another lucky player. When Cecil B. De Mille made Dynamite she played one of the girls in the hoop-race episode. Today she has a five-year contract at RKO. Lita Chevret and Velma Valentine also have been signed on long term contracts by this company.

Warner Brothers chose Leon Janney, the boy-star of "Courage," from the ranks of child extras at the Central Casting Bureau. Only this week Hal Roach has elevated two-year-old children from extras to members of "Our Gang." They are Shirley Jean Ricketts and Dorothy De-Borba.

Raoul Walsh picked John Wayne from the atmosphere people and gave him one of the leads in "The Oregon Trail." Universal has given Kane Richmond the lead in "The Leather Pushers." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has Lucille Powers.

Of course the percentage represented by 20 out of 17,000 is small. But the extra-route still is one way to stardom.

A SAFE GUESS

John Barryomre tells this one on himself. When "Moby Dick" was being filmed the star was required to stand on the deck of a ship while 400 tons of water was hurled upon him.

"'Lymey,'" Warner's cockney prop-boy and a devoted admirer of Barrymore, stood by and watched with a frown.

"'That's John Barrymore, more water than the governor has drank in 20 years,'" he observed lugubriously.

STUDIO BURNS

An old studio where Charlie Chaplain made his early comedies burned here this week.

It held many memories, for the comedian filmed "Carmen," "The Bank," "Shanghaied," "A Night at the Show" and several other pictures on its ancient stages.

In those days, Charlie was working for Essenay, and he spent so much on his comedies that Hal Roach used to have to do quickies to get ready cash in hand. Charlie originally made his Essanay comedies in Chicago. After that he worked in Niles, a suburb of San Francisco. The studio that burned was his third location.

Truck Chain Hits Boy In Bus, Suit Follows

Details of a peculiar accident are revealed in a suit filed for an 11-year-old boy in Common Pleas Court. Kenneth Hulton, through his father, Frank Hulton, of East Oakmont, is asking $15,000 damages from J. A. Thompson, a trucker of Blawnox.

He avers that on March 5 last, while the boy was a passenger on a bus traveling on the West Hulton road, a truck owned by the defendant passed. He says a chain designed to hold the endgate of the truck was loose and swung through the window of the bus, striking the boy and breaking his arm.

Makes Music

Johnny Brown, music maker, brings his Great White Fleet dance orchestra to Kennywood Park next Monday for the Mardi Gras celebration.

SOCIETY IN NEWPORT AND MR. POWELL IN ENRIGHT

By KAYE GODARD

A sophisticated tale of society in Newport, "Ladies Must Play," has Dorothy Sebastian and Neil Hamilton heading its cast in the Enright. Miss Sebastian plays the part of a private secretary whose employer is a young stock broker on the verge of going "broke."

This secretary has high ambitions which center around marrying a rich man, a member of the social elect, and the richer he is the more she wants to marry him. The young stock broker gets big hearted and decides to help her out, on a basis of ten per cent of the rich man's millions as commission. So he takes her to Newport for a week, fits her out in a wardrobe that seems a trifle lavish for one on the verge of bankruptcy, introduces her as his cousin, and sits back and watches the men flock around her.

ALMOST ENGAGED

He gives her tips on the wealthier ones, and, although he gets decidedly uncomfortable at the whole procedure, sees her almost get engaged to the richest of them all.

That plan doesn't work out so well, so she becomes engaged to another one. The day before the wedding she decides that it's all too much of a sham and confesses to her fiance that she doesn't love him. She surprises herself and everyone else by then falling in love with her now almost penniless ex-employer, but she loses her ideas about wealth and they go off to be married.

ON THE STAGE

On the stage the Enright Rockets return and are prominently featured in Dick Powell's show, "Hello Girls." Their chorus work is most creditably done, and they promise to be a lively addition to future stage shows. Twenty Fingers of Sweetness do a piano act in a pleasing way. Dick Powell and the Enright stage band offer a group of requested selections.

Squirrel Hill Thieves Ro'''ed, Get Necklace

Two men, surprised looting the home of Dr. John H. Jones, at 5614 Aylesboro avenue, late yesterday, were being sought by Squirrel Hill police today. The pair fled when a maid entered a house. Their only loot was a necklace valued at $55.

WARING WE LIKE BUT DON'T FORGET PESETZKI

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

William Haines, the smart alec of the movies, is the star on the Penn screen. He is fast becoming boredom's gift to humanity. Which is like a present from an unwelcome relative.

His picture is titled "Way Out West." It is about a young fellow, a tenderfoot, who becomes a cowboy and gets the girl. He says "I love you," and he is so in earnest that he's willing to shoot every one in Arizona. But he doesn't need to. All he has to do is to pile a lot of furniture against a door and the heroine is his. Hurrah!

A MUSICAL SHOWMAN

But be of good cheer. The big event in the Penn is the appearance of Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians. And they have a nice act. Mr. Waring is a showman to the extent that he doesn't want to be the whole show. He "plays up" his orchestra individually and collectively.

He gives us a slant on the "Rhapsody in Blue" that might worry Paul Whiteman in his idle moments. But it is clever.

Mr. Waring is not dependent on music alone. He has a keen sense of scenic values. With a few manipulations of the electric light switch he displays musical showmanship. And another thing, the influence of the Negro spirituals is there, not in the melody but in the gesture.

LIGHT AND EASY

After all though, if it is music you are after, the Penn has it every week without any Mr. Waring. We refer to David Pesetzki. Here is a man that makes music live. He makes it shriek right out at you. He makes it cut into you. Maybe it is light and easy to take music like his current display of "New Moon" tunes; maybe it is the deeper stuff of the Old Masters like he gives once in a while. But whatever it is, this Pesetzki has the right complex. He is the artist. He is even the "artist" to the old formula. He has the bushy head of hair.

Well, that is all, except that members of "Pittsburgh's Mixed Chorus" will be glad to know that Wild Oscar bounces up with the organ.

OAKIE GOES 'NATIVE' IN MOVIE MANNER IN ALDINE

"Let's Go Native" may be a good idea, but as a picture, showing at the Aldine, it's not all it might be.

In the film a musical comedy is transported, bag and baggage, to South America, at the whim of a milionaire in Buenos Aires. Jeanette MacDonald, the star of the troupe, is followed in a devoted manner by her fiance, the grandson of a millionaire, played by James Hall.

Throughout the picture they spend their time having misunderstandings, being disinherited, and making up with each other. Then Skeets Gallagher bursts upon the scene as the "head man" on an island, where he has made all the young charmers on said island his slaves and willing subjects, and where he has taught them all the latest dance steps of Broadway. And then a shipwrecked party, lost on the island, is conveniently rescued and taken back to the civilized regions of New York.

The story is a weak and impossible one and the humor at times far-fetched. The best part of the whole thing is the well-trained chorus which dances at odd moments and does so in a professionally practiced manner.

Diving Act Comes To Kennywood Park

Concerts tomorrow afternoon and evening in Kennywood Park are to be played by Johnny Brown and his Great White Fleet Orchestra, the same band which will furnish dance music during the Mardi Gras week, beginning Monday. After today free outdoor entertainment in Kennywood will be furnished by Miss Bench Bentum and her Diving Mermaids. They will perform in a large tank on the Spectacle stage.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

An Elegy On a Lost Lover

(Just a week after the final blow.)

Beloved Rogue: Sometime ago your Cleveland nurse wrote—and although I do not recall entirely what it was she decried, I think it was the fact that she merely existed, did not really live at all. May I add that the whole thing struck me as being only a circumlocution through which to indicate that she wantel not life—just lots of mazda and People—people who mattered. She's all wrong there—it is not people who matter, it is Persons who matter.

You gave her, if I recall correctly, the old bunk about Broadway being just a trail of broken bottles and cheap mink coats, about people who just pretend they are enjoying it all, about the yellow sun and the green grass being everything, how everybody really wants to live in the country and raise chickens, etc.

Well, I don't know whether or not it worked, but see if you can give me some good advice. First I'll tell you what I want, and what I once had, and then I'll tell you what I have now. I think that's the simplest way out, don't you?

Here's what I want. I want to lean over a table top and hear somebody say, "Why are your eyes so blue? And your lips so sweet and your hands so white?" And I want to look up and drown deep in a pair of dark eyes, and to hold on to the edge of the table to keep from sinking and say, "And what makes your hair so black, and your teeth so white, and why do I adore you so?" And I want to see the amused glance of the waiter in Riggs', and I want to say, "I want anything you want, anything at all."

And to feel myself pouring out in harmony with his soul, and to feel each beat in his blood as well as in mine, and to sway, and to hear him say, "Honey, isn't it marvelous," and then to sit and wonder for the rest of my life how marvelous that we two of a whole world of people had been thrown together, and to say, "I wonder just how many times I have passed you, going in and out of trains. I wonder what pulled me toward you in that st e?" and so on.

And I want to ride in the subway with him and hear him say, "I don't like the way that villain in the gray suit stares at you. Shall I tear his eyes out," and to answer back, "If you'll help me with that female in the black dress, who can't seem to be able to tear her eyes from you, although I must admit I don't blame her." And to hear him say, "Gee, Honey, I never met a girl like you before, you're different," and to hear him say, "and I won't ever have to meet a girl like you, because I'll have you for ever and ever, and then I'd say, "Yes, even if forever only means—only lasts two weeks with us," and to hear him say, "Don't speak like that, Honey," and then to answer, "We won't let it drag, we'll just break it off like that, you know, sharp-like, so that there won't be any ragged edges, nothing to cheapen it."

Can you understand that, sir? And if you can, don't you think I want to have the thrill of standing up in the subway, next to him, and to wish the fat woman next to me would push hard, and when she finally did I'd find my nose some place between his chin and his shoulder, and I'd like to have something funny happen in the train, where it would be a breach of manners to laugh.

He always said, "You know that it's not lust, don't you honey? You know that!" And of course I knew it, because I wanted to know it, and because I was so dizzy about him, and I'd give anything in the world to hear him say again, "Now I know how it was with Paul and Francesca, now I understand how Dante felt about Beatrice. Honey, that's just the way I feel about you," and then to come home in the evening and to weave a fairy tale about some position I had tried to secure, and to feel so delicious, because I was lying, and to simply hibernate till the next time I saw him, and to never even wonder about what I would do without him, because I knew it was impossible.

That's what I want. And now I'll tell you what I have. A friend who told me not to believe him. But she was bitter and disillusioned, anyway—All alone, that's what I am. I work now—have a fairly good position, and hate it—and every morning I long for the night—and every night I just walk and walk—and look my very best, because otherwise would never do, if I should happen to meet him, you know—and look into the eyes of everyone who passes—and always walk on disappointed.

Have you ever looked for something and not know what it was? Have you ever felt you must do something and hear some beautiful music—and melt into tears at the first bar? And because the lights looked so friendly, and welcoming, and because so many people walk there, walked on Broadway—up and down, from 42nd street past the Roxy Theater—and then back to 42nd—and then to ride home again on the Bronx train—have you ever?

And to just walk miles and miles and wonder if anybody can understand—and if I'd ever meet that person, and wondering if it was really because I loved him so, or because he'd been the first to get tired—when I'd always been the one to do that before—and why did it have to happen to me, instead of anybody else, and why in connection with him rather than any one of the other fellows I ever knew and didn't care for that way, or maybe I'm getting a taste of my own medicine, but I bet nobody ever took it so hard before in the world—nobody at all.

And then I'd make up my mind to answer the very next pair of smiling eyes and broad shoulders, because I am of the type that must be wildly enthusiastic about somebody or something every minute of my life, or it all becomes a blank—and then, saying to myself, "Well, it's just as well I let him pass. He might have turned out to be stupid, anyway," and all the time I know he isn't stupid, not at all. Or when I sit in the subway and look at some ugly girl, sitting with her boy friend, and think that even if she is very stupid, still she's enjoying herself more than I probably ever will again, and how come I had all the luck, and sometimes I see some handsome chap in the subway, and I compare him with my past future, and he always suffers by the comparison, and then I always feel so sorry for myself, and wish I—shall I go over all that again?

What does Doctor Winchell, the great Medicine Man, suggest? What does he offer as advice for the young lady who just walks and walks, and walks and walks—in an effort to recapture the charm, or perhaps forget, those other walks. And why do my eyes fill up so when some idiot gets up and sings "I Still Get a Thrill Thinking of You"—or the other silly little songs that never used to tug at my heart when he was Mine?

—J—— S——

Why, er—you simply—you merely—what I mean, my dear is that you must simply try to —er—er—you go along and try to—er—er—oh, you know what I mean. You, er, mustn't listen to those sort of songs, and you should try and—dismiss it. That's it! Dismiss it from your mind. I'm sorry if I haven't made myself clear, but you know what I mean, don't you? I mean that you should—er—er——

SUE AND ARTHUR PUT 'TOMMY' IN THE SHERIDAN

The Sheridan Square shows "She's My Weakness," with Arthur Lake and Sue Carol, as its new feature.

The plot concerns a young girl, the only child in the family who is imposed upon and overruled at every turn by her parents. There are, as always, two boys who pay marked attention to the "sweet young thing." By a strange coincidence the one she cares for is the same one her parents want her to marry, but she becomes stubborn at their persistent praise and flattery of the boy and gives most of her time to the other one.

Well, it gets more and more complicated. The girl's kindhearted uncle tries to help things out and only makes them worse for a while. Then, after a half hour or so of strange developments and embarrassing moments, the affair begins to be settled. It ends with the right boy, and the whole family rejoicing.

Miss Carol and Mr. Lake do their parts well. The uncle is played by William Collier, Sr., and the father, who runs a livery stable, by Lucien Littlefield.

Osborne Orchestra In Villa Tonight

Will Osborne, young crooner, will bring his broadcasting orchestra to Eddie Klein's Villa, Babcock boulevard, for a one-night stand tonight. He will alternate with Jimmy Joy and his orchestra. Joy will conclude his stay at the Villa Monday. On Tuesday Emerson Gill and his band will open an extended engagement.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question—A noted Missouri suffragist is "discouraged with women in politics," saying that they have failed in that line altogether. What is your opinion?

W. H. MOORE, Mt. Washington—I agree. Politics isn't a line of business for a woman and they certainly have failed in it so far. They should keep out of things like that anyway.

W. H. Moore

MISS MARY POWELL, filing clerk, Schenley Heights—I think that the majority of the men in politics have failed too, so it's hardly reasonable for them to blame the women for their discouragement.

Miss Powell

F. J. GRAFF, Allentown—My opinion on that question is that the man is right. Women have failed so far in politics, and they have no business getting mixed up in them anyway.

F. J. Graff

J. J. ROST, assistant cashier, Knoxville—I don't think politics is the right place for women, but, nevertheless, they haven't failed in that line. The men associated with them in politics are the ones who have failed.

J. J. Rost

MISS HELEN MERCER, filing clerk, Carrick—I don't see why anyone should make a statement like that—no more women have failed in politics than men have, and they shouldn't take all the blame for that.

Miss Mercer

R. J. GISSENDANER, assistant superintendent, Carrick—I think that women should keep out of politics altogether. They can be successful in some lines of business, but that's a field that isn't suited to them.

Raquel Finds Greta Hiding With Strange Man

CHAPTER XXXIV.

"What is wrong with women, anyway?" Raquel asked herself that night after she had returned the coral earrings to their cache in the cheap leather coin-purse and, with troubled mind, disposed herself for sleep.

"This Mrs. Dexter, for example. Torturing herself because she can't have what she has virtually thrown away. I'll bet she wears flannel nightgowns and does her hair in a braid."

She wanted to whip up compassion for the woman who suffered so poignantly. To put ardor, determination into the business of making Mrs. Dexter ready for what was to be a campaign of reclamation. She could find no heart in the task.

Didn't she know he was not her property, body and soul, forever, just because she got him once? She should have. She must have seen, often enough, what happens to her kind. There isn't a man, not one, who can't be coaxed away if he's left to run loose or if he's fed on nothing but cold potatoes or molasses, or chili peppers at home. Nothing will hold them, once they're fed up."

Love? Love is beauty. Love thrives on beauty. Starve it, and love dies. As Dexter's love for his wife was dead.

Value of Beauty

Money? Money can buy, but it cannot guarantee more than a temporary ownership at best. It is the irony of Fate that to those who sell themselves basely, the very prizes for which they entered into shameful bargain lose all value once the prizes are possessed. Elsworth Bosart. He was one who sold, and now strove to repudiate his bargain.

But Beauty. Beauty was different. Beauty was omnipotent.

"Beauty took Bill Johnson away from Lily," Raquel whispered to herself. "Beauty made Jack Farrell lend me the money so I could get out of Hermosa. That stupid conductor—do you think he would have let me ride to Phoenix without paying if I had been ugly, or even just plain? And the paradise hat! I'd still be wearing the shabby old felt. I'd be in New York, married to Jack Farrell—bound for life. Instead of on this ship, free, going to Paris. Bosart, Bertie Adams, Alphonse, flowers, these downy blankets, that closet full of wonderful clothes, music. All servants of beauty."

Yes. There could be no doubt of it. Beauty ruled the world.

Well, then, beauty might still be made to rule Mrs. Dexter's husband. He had it, in the woman like a beautiful serpent, the woman Mrs. Dexter had told her about. But he would be ready for a new, a different kind of beauty. He was like Alphonse. A humming-bird, seeking fresh flowers.

"She can probably get him back," Raquel said aloud. "Not that she deserves to. She deserved exactly what she has. As I would deserve what I'd get if I had stayed on in the desert and let that great devil of a Pancho sell me to Bill Johnson."

She felt a slight twinge of conscience over her bald arraignment of Pancho. Not because he was her father and she had blasphemed against him, rather because she knew that in the beginning she herself conceived the idea of selling herself to the man who was in a position to make the highest bid she might expect.

Raquel's Charm

Alphonse had contracted to metamorphose Mrs. Dexter from a light that hides under a bushel into a star shining in a high heaven, dimming the radiance of the other stars around it. He would make the most of her cameo-like features, create new reasons why she should be conspicuous in a city consecrated to fashion, frivolity, and the loveliness of women.

"It will be amusing to see what happens," Raquel said to Alphonse the next morning. "I'd like to see Mr. Dexter's face when he sees what you've done with his wife. I wonder what he's like. Will I meet him?"

Alphonse shook his head. His wise face crinkled into a smile.

"I think not, ma petite," he said. "I fear if it is arranged that you meet this so silly man, our campaign will be doomed to failure. And Madame Dexter will be convinced another serpent has entered her Adamless Eden."

Raquel frowned. Did Alphonse think she was so light of mind? That she would spoil his plans, fail him? For the attentions of a man, however flattering they might be? She was different.

"Now, now," Alphonse soothed. "I meant no offense. It is that you cannot help being as you are. To one who is attuned to beauty, especially to exoticism, you are as a goblet of rare wine. Sparkling wine, ruby red, from the cellar of an epicure."

"To you, perhaps." Raquel was mollified by the tribute.

"To all men." Alphonse would brook no exception to his judgment. "Besides, I know Dexter. He is a connoisseur of beauty. Or rather, he was. I am sorry for his wife, for Madame Dexter. Yet I cannot blame her husband."

"Nor can I," said Raquel.

Alphonse gave her a long look. There was something like regret in his eyes. Understanding and regret.

"No. You wouldn't," he said. "You could never be a Madame Bosart. You are too—sensible."

Raquel was sure he meant to say "too hard," and had caught himself in time.

After Raquel had said her adieus to Alphonse that evening—it was nearly midnight—she passed a woman in the corridor outside the suite. The woman eyed her boldly, almost belligerently, as they passed.

A Jealous Wife

"She looks as if she'd like to bite me," Raquel thought. "There, she's turned and is coming back. She's upset about something."

The suite was in darkness. That was strange. A light was always left burning, the amber one on the table. Greta must have forgotten and turned it out.

"Raquel." A voice swished through the darkness. "That you?"

It was Greta. Greta was in this room.

"Yes, of course. Turn on the light."

"No, no. Don't touch it. Did you notice a woman in the corridor when you came in?"

"Why, yes—"

A low moan from Greta. "Keep quiet, for the love of Pete. I got a friend in here with me. We're hiding from the woman out there."

"But Greta—"

"I know, Raquel. You think I'm terrible. You think I'm wicked. Oh, Cousin Raquel, what will Uncle Alphonse say?" Smothered sobs in the darkness.

"Uncle Al—"

"I know. He'll be wild. He'll send me back to the convent."

"Don't cry, I'll—" A man's voice, muffled, from somewhere in the room.

"You'll—oh, you. It's all your fault. How did I know when you took me on the top deck and kissed me, that you had a jealous wife watching every move you make? And now we've had to hide in here. What will people say? You're a terrible man, getting a young girl into trouble like this. Oh—oh—oh! And Uncle Al promised I could have my own car if I behaved. I won't go back to the convent, Raquel. I won't. O-o-o-oh."

Horoscopes

Sunday, August 24.

Sunday's horoscope holds augury of strange and eventful experiences or adventures, attended by a breaking of old obstructions and long crystallized conditions. This may relate to employment, to new ventures or to hidden plans or secret agreements. These should flourish, as should all steady effort in the way of industry and application.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a very important year, with many opportunities in employment and in fresh ventures, following the removal of tenacious obstacles and crystallized conditions.

A child born in this day may be talented, industrious and steady, and should attain to stable position through its own industry and effort, especially in lines where diplomacy or secret alliances are involved.

Monday, August 25.

Monday's astrological forecast is a very intriguing one, with the orb of the secret, hidden and mysterious in the ascendant. By lunar direction, the social, domestic and affectional relations will be under active stimulus, while in the business realm those things relating to close corporations, mergers, combines and secret orders and agreements should be most active and progressive. The attitude may incline toward Utopian or idealistic plans.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of singular or unique experiences or adventures.

A child born on this day may have a tendency toward the unusual, peculiar, marvelous or mystical, in business as well as social relations. It may be artistic or idealistic in its expressions and adventures.

Appetite Takers

If small sweet crackers, cookies and pretzels were bought less in households where there are children, there would be less wonder as to why small son or daughter never eats a good dinner. Eating these small things is ruinous to a child's appetite and digestion.

LIFE SAVERS

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY

Life savers—on a hot August day, when the world needs distraction, Beauty and cheer; or menaces to life and peace on a hot August day when the world in difficulties enough, uncomfortable enough, without the final word in disturbers? Which? The let-us-be-joyful soul greets the spectacle of the sea, blue and boisterous, decorated around the edges by pretty women in dizzily-colored pajamas and flower-garden swimming suits, with sounds of joy and gratitude. He is the Optimist in Love, and he calls them life savers. The life-is-a-burden-and-beauty-is-a-snare person greets the sea with suspicion, color as an irritation, and a pretty woman singing "Have a smile with me" as he would barbed wire or a stingin' lizard. He is the Pessimist in Love, and he calls them Menaces! Sirens.

Beauty will make YOU forget your torrid state, says you, even when it and the sea, being of the year of nineteen-thirty, sings "Do-do-de-OH do," instead of "Sweet and Low." But the Cynic looks aslant at the pretty figures, the fetching faces, the skin-fitting trifles of color they wear, the bits of sandals, the knickknacks in the way of bags and hats, the powder and lip red, the free ways and poses, and ahh the allure! and he snorts, "Life-savers! BAH! MENaces I call 'em, one and all. The hot weather's bad enough to bear, without the sea and a siren to catch and drown you, FAR from saving your life!"

Every story has TWO DIFFERENT versions. To Jack, Jean's eyes are blue; but Jim swears they are hazel brown.

Jim is a hero to Jean, but Jassmine thinks him dull.

Beauty herself, to hear the world tell it, appears in a confusion of disguises, and every witness' description of her adds to the array of her portraits. What Optimist calls a life saver indeed, Cynic sniffs at, and labels "Danger!"

Love's Reawakening

Harry Informs Madge of "Mystery Driver" Trailing Them

I snapped back a decided answer to Lillian's irresolute statement concerning something which she would like to do for Robert Savarin.

"What do you mean by 'ought?'" I queried. "Is it fear for Robert's reaction or Harry's which is troubling you?"

"Both," she answered surprisingly. "It's just this—"

She walked to one of the capacious closets which form one of the hotel's chief attractions for women. It was one which I knew she used for putting away things only rarely used, and I watched her curiously as she went to the farthest end of it and brought out a blue and silver afternoon gown of the vintage of several years back, a gown which had been peculiarly becoming to her.

"I couldn't tell this to anyone but you, Madge," she said, "and it isn't easy—even to tell you."

"Don't be idiotic," I said with deliberate tartness. "I'd like to know anything you couldn't tell me. And if my eyes are in working order, you don't need to tell me anything. Isn't that the gown that Robert used to admire so extravagantly, and ask you to wear so frequently?"

"I ought not to have kept it, I suppose," she said, "but it wasn't worn, and I hated to destroy it or have someone else wear it. But I do want you to know that I haven't given it a thought until now for a long time."

"I know that without your telling me," I said. "And there was no reason in the world for your discarding it. It's a mighty good thing that you did keep it, for I imagine it is going to mean a lot to Robert."

"You mean," she faltered, "that you think I ought——"

"I don't know what you 'ought'," I retorted, "but I know what you're going to do. You're going to give me this gown now to pack, together with a light coat to wear in case you have to take off your big coat before you get to Robert's room. And as soon as we get to that place opposite Mrs. Cosgrove's, you're going to get into this gown so that Robert will see you in the gown he loved best. Give it to me and tell me where I'll find the shoes and hose that go with it. And give me your aqua marines—you always wore them with it, I remember. And hurry—before Harry gets back."

She drew back the dress which she had extended to me.

"There! You see!" she exclaimed. "That very speech makes me—"

"Will you stop acting like a newly engaged girl of the Victorian era trying to confess to her betrothed husband that once when she was 15 she played a kissing game at a church social?" I took the dress from her arm as I spoke, and laughed to silence the little voice which told me that I was not so sure of Harry Underwood's tolerance of this incident as I pretended to be. "Do you trust your husband so little as to think that he would strain at this particular little gnat when he has already swallowed a particularly large camel? The reason why I want to get your things packed is because he is in such a tearing hurry to get up there. He has to get back, you know."

"Oh! I'm so stupid!" she cried. "Of course, you must hurry! I'll tell you just where the things are."

"Sit down there while you do it," I commanded, pointing to an easy chair, and she obeyed meekly. I know her things so well that I needed little direction and had her bag packed and strapped by the time Mr. Underwood appeared again in the wake of a boy with a laden tea tray.

"Nothing but tea and crackers," he announced, "for we'll eat that lunch on the road. But I thought you'd all better have a cup of tea. Don't stand on ceremony though. We're going out of here in less than five minutes."

He was as good as his word, but he adroitly managed to get a word alone with me as Lillian and Mary went ahead to the elevator.

"Did you lamp that bird good?" he demanded.

"I looked at him very carefully," I answered.

"Don't go up in the air, but he followed us all the way in. By Heck, he isn't going to trail us the rest of the way, or my name isn't Hawkshaw, the original slew-eth. But I want to keep an eye on him in the mirror, so I'm going to make an excuse for you to sit with me in front for a while. Keep your eyes open, but don't let Lil catch you at it. Give Mary the office to keep Lil's attention. She'll know how to do it, she's trouper enough for that."

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

The Silly Season.

The average man's conscience is like a canvas shoe: he just spreads a little "whitening" over the spots—and, behold, it is clean, pure and all set for another day.

Probably no two things in the world require a more highly specialized genius than authorship and marriage. Yet there never lived a man who didn't feel secretly convinced that he could write a book or make a woman happy.

An eel will swim 3,000 miles to find himself a mate, according to the scientists. And then, no doubt, he'll think of himself as a "poor fish" and say that the lady-eel lured him into matrimony.

* * *

In novels and on the screen the hero is always "just in time," but in real life any man who is less than 20 minutes late for anything, from an appointment to his wedding, regards himself as a "hero."

* * *

"A motor car," says the Bachelor, "may be as capricious, as expensive and as hard to understand as a woman—but it never gets a martyr-complex."

* * *

When a woman finds herself heading for temptation she cries, "Get thee behind me, Satan!" A man, in the same predicament, cries, "Get thee behind me, Satan—and give me a shove!"

* * *

Nothing makes a man more uncomfortable than to be idealized and adored by a woman, when he only wanted to be amused and petted a little.

* * *

Why do most women seem to imagine that the ultimate proof of a man's love is not his willingness to do something altruistic and noble, but his readiness to do something weak and foolish for a woman's sake?

This is the "silly season," when a man and a girl stroll out to enjoy the beauty of the moon—and then forget to look at it.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Welfare Work Shows Its Value.

A wonderful work is being done by the Children's Welfare Federation of New York City. It is undertaking the task of improving the condition and saving the lives of thousands of mothers and babies.

DR COPELAND

There has been launched a campaign to raise $100,000 to carry on this important work. It is to be hoped that generous response will be made on the part of the public.

The recent report of the executive committee of the federation brings the cheerful news of considerable improvement in the infant death rate since 1912. In 1912, 105 infants died out of every 1,000 born. In 1929 there were 58 infant deaths out of every 1,000 born.

This decrease in the infant death rate is due to the special baby health work. It has been shown that at least half of these infant deaths could be prevented by proper maternity care.

The news concerning maternity mortality is not so encouraging. It is a startling fact that today the death rate from childbirth among the mothers of infants is on an average of about one out of every 200. There is no need for this high death rate. Proper care at the proper time would mean life to these mothers.

The Federation reports that the needs of more than 52,000 mothers and children were attended to by the Federation last year. More than 9,000 mothers were given nursing care. 20,000 babies were placed in baby health stations and some 4,000 were placed in convalescent homes and temporary shelters, hospitals, day nurseries and boarding homes.

One of the most valuable services rendered by the Federation is that of supplying milk from nursing mothers for sick and premature infants. Five hundred sick and premature babies, whose own mothers could not give them food, and who would have died but for the care by the Federation Bureau, were supplied with mother's milk last year.

These are noble citizens who are working to save the lives of thousands of mothers and babies in the great city. We owe it to them, and to the mothers and babies who are struggling to live, the help they need so much. No matter where we live we should be generous in giving to this splendid work in our respective communities.

Such a fund as this campaign calls for means healthy babies and well mothers. It means that thousands of undernourished, wan-faced babies will be turned into vigorous, happy children. It means that these future citizens of the country will be efficient, healthy men and women through proper food and care. Isn't that a worthwhile enterprise?

Tell It to Sally

By SALLY MARTIN

'Tantrum Technique' Is Hard On Marriage.

Remember the fable of the lonely young sheep herder who collected an audience every now and then, by crying, "Wolf! Wolf!"

It was great stuff while it lasted—but it happened once too often.

Mr. Aesop knew his humans when he wrote that tale—and Rosalie would be happier today if she'd profited by it. For Rosalie also cried "Wolf!" . . . and look what happened to her!

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I have been a reader of your column for a long time, and I have always thought that people were foolish to bother you with their problems, but now I am going to do it myself. I do hope you can give me a hand, because I need it desperately. Here's my trouble.

"Harry and I went together seven months before we were married. He seemed to be everything any girl would want except for one thing. And that was his obstinate, quick-tempered nature—and his liking at times for drink. Now I am not going to let you think I consider myself an angel, either. No, not by any means. In fact, I'm just as obstinate and quick-tempered as he is. And that's where the trouble lies. Well, anyway, I married him—against a lot of protests.

"And all the warnings have come true. During the nine months that we have been married, I have left Harry three times. Why? Only because we'd get into an argument, and in my fury, I would pack up and leave. Well, after I'd been gone a day or two, Harry would come after me, pay my hotel bill and beg me to give him another chance. And I would. That is, he did that twice.

"However, the other day, we had another argument, and this time, I will admit I was to blame. And when I started to leave he didn't try to stop me. I really didn't want to go, but I was too obstinate to admit it. And I was sure that in a day or two, he would be after me. But how sadly fooled I was! He didn't even try to get in touch with me. So I tried to reach him, and after a very disgusting quarrel, I finally made him consent to see me.

"Then the blow hit me. He told me that I had left him once too often. That he was through! Now I knew that I was in the wrong and I tried to plead and beg with him to reconsider. But he said I had killed his love by acting the way I did. I begged and begged him.

"Now, Sally, since that, I have gone through the agonies of hell. The trouble is that I love him, and I am afraid I will never get over it. I can't sleep nights, I can't eat. I but sit around and mope and cry. I even went so far as to write him a letter after I saw him. I thought he would have a better chance to think over a letter. But no answer has come yet. Do you think I can win him back? Is he just stringing me to make me learn? Or does he mean it?

"Oh! I'm so unhappy! Please be sorry for me and help me.

"ROSALIE."

Sorry for you? Nothing doing, youngster. I'm tickled pink that he did it! For, perhaps this will teach you some sense—and save you from infinitely greater heartache later on.

For you've had this coming to you, Rosalie. Marriage isn't to blame. Your husband isn't to blame. You—yourself—are to blame. You, with your Tantrum Technique. It's a great lil technique for pouty babies, kid. But it will only buy you a sock in the ear, if you prolong it beyond the romper stage. And now—you've had your sock. Well, here's hoping it cured you of what ails you.

This shut-out won't last long. It's evident that the Big Boy is as crazy about you as you are about him. Long before you read this, you'll be gathered once more in his loving arms. Use your head and stay there. The staying won't always be easy. Marriage, like any other game, has the usual hazards. But if you'll use the common sense and control which you'd have to use in any $18 a week job, you'll make the grade. And if you don't—well, you'll get what you deserve—the air!

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Conspicuous Costumes

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

If one is not fortunate enough to be able to go to and from the beaches in an automobile, is it improper to wear beach pajamas on a street car (or, for that matter, on any public vehicle?)

A READER.

Yes, this would be in the worst of taste. Anything conspicuous is in bad taste, of course, and I can think of few things more conspicuous.

Candle Light

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please let me know whether it is good form, when entertaining at bridge in the evening, to use lighted candles on the table when serving lunch in the dining room?

F. C.

Yes, this is excellent form, and in charming taste. Candle light is the loveliest light for a home, and gives the beautiful glow that makes the party seem even more delightful.

RETAIL TRADE IMPROVES SLIGHTLY

Building Construction Much Below Normal; Collections Better

With normal temperatures prevailing, a slight improvement is noted in retail trade and also in wholesale circles, although there is comparatively little buying for future requirements as yet, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Jobbers of men's and women's wearing apparel, dry goods and shoes report sales showing some improvement, but still below normal for this period of the year. Merchants in farming communities continue to be very light buyers, as a heavy loss has been sustained by many farmers, due to the lack of rain, and prospects in such sections are not encouraging.

Building construction continues much below normal, with residential construction at a very low rate and demand for lumber and other building materials continues quiet. Manufacturers of electrical equipment are transacting a fair volume of business, although the movement of fixtures is rather light.

Manufacturers of sanitary and heating equipment report demand still slow, but anticipate some improvement in the near future. Demand for automobiles and accessories continues quite a little below normal. Crude oil production shows a further decrease, and the average daily production is reported to be about 500,000 barrels lower than a year ago at this time.

Although the general collection situation shows a slight improvement, jobbers report the average as still being slow.

PLANT ADDITION

In addition to the manufacture and installation of dumb waiters, the Marshall Company builds and installs passenger and freight elevators of all capacities and speeds.

The Marshall Company recently installed an electric engine equipped with electric control for moving gondola cars of slag from the loading yard to the crusher and return the empty cars for reloading. This operation is continuous for 24 hours per day six days a week at the Duquesne Slag Company's plant in Pittsburgh.

A fire door department has been added to the Marshall factory, located at Twenty-first street, South Side, where the Marshall fireproof doors for elevators, warehouses, stores and buildings of all kinds are being manufactured. All of these doors comply with the Fire Underwriters' regulations.

Wadhams Oil Head Denies Vacuum Deal

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 23.—A. G. Macguire, president of Wadhams Oil Company of Milwaukee, denied that his company had been sold to Vacuum Oil Company. He stated that negotiations are under way with Vacuum and other companies but that no transaction has been closed. Sales of oil by Wadhams in 1929 aggregated more than $10,000,000.

GLASS SALES FAIRLY GOOD

The glass container industry is anxious to see terminated the drought that has been prevalent in a number of the states, according to National Glass Budget. There are several kinds of crops which are at or near to the maturing point at present. A seasonable amount of rain would have a very beneficial effect thereon.

At the present time containers for ketchups, chili sauces and others products are moving into the hands of the packers. It is estimated that there will be a 75 per cent yield of the tomato planting this year. Inasmuch as the plantage was decidedly above the average, it is possible that the actual pack of these lines in 1930 will be close to 90 per cent of a normal year.

Jars for packing pickles and preserves are in good demand. The average yearly production of cucumber pickles in the United States is about 3,000,000,000, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. In the neighborhood of 74,000 acres of ground are annually devoted to the growing of pickles. The annual return to the growers is in the neighborhood of $4,000,000.

Demand for jelly and preserve glasses is understood to be off to some extent in many parts of the country. The market for fruit jars has been more or less disappointing. The logical reason for this is that in many instances old jars are again put back into use. Proof of this statement is afforded owing to the fact that manufacturers of jar lids are meeting up with an unusual demand for their product.

Vail Resigns Post With Durant Co.

LANSING, Mich., Aug. 23.—Ralph A. Vail, vice president of Durant Motors, Inc., has announced his resignation. He had been connected with the concern as vice president since January 1, 1929. He was retained last week when William C. Durant announced the reorganization of the executive personnel with himself as president. Mentioned as Vail's successor is Edward Ver Linden, a member of the board.

Katanga Copper Increase Is Predicted

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Sir Robert Williams, vice president of Union Miniers du Haut-Katanga, big African copper producer, says that the copper production of the company is little more than half what it will be. In the past his predictions on production increases have always been accurate.

Union Minier's cost of production leaves a very satisfactory margin of profit with copper at its present price. By running its plants at capacity on its higher grade ores, particularly those from its western mines, Union Miniere reduces costs to a very low level.

After next March, when the Congo extension of the Benguela Railway will be connected, ores from the western mines can be delivered regularly to Union Miniere's existing reduction works. From then on also, there will be a further gradual decline in production costs, as more and more of the copper and supplies are carried over the Benguela Railway.

SMALL LOANS AID CREDIT

The personal finance business is relieving the credit situation for the merchants of Pittsburgh and of other cities in which companies licensed under the uniform small loan law operate, according to Mr. Schmalzried, local manager of the Household Finance Corporation. This fact is revealed in the statement of the Russell Sage Foundation that household bills for groceries, meats, etc., totaling more than $425,000,000 annually are paid with money borrowed from these companies in the sums of $300 or less.

The Russell Sage Foundation, which sponsored the uniform law, explains that the legitimate small loan business has become a credit stabilizer of untold value, both to merchants and individuals.

Experience of the small loan companies shows that much of the money borrowed from them goes immediately into the cash registers of local merchants, thus relieving the merchant of a credit burden and keeping the customer's credit good.

Under the small loan law, borrowers may obtain sums up to $300, which are paid back in monthly installments and for which the maximum interest rate allowed is 3½ per cent a month on unpaid balances, while certain companies charge a lower rate. The law does not permit the charge of any fees.

AKRON, O., Aug. 22.—Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company will cut production during the first week in September to a level of activity about 80 per cent of the present rate in plant number one, which manufactures large size tires. Number two plant, which turns out smaller sizes, will operate at about 25 per cent of the present rates.

Shell Union Tank Shipments Increase

HOUSTON, Tex., Aug. 23.—Tanker shipments from Shell Union Oil Corporation's new refinery at Deer Park on the Houston ship channel are increasing monthly. During July the corporation shipped 735,467 barrels of refined oils and 357,898 barrels of crude oil. In June refined shipments totaled 491,836 barrels and crude shipments 447,493 barrels.

TREND LACKING IN STEEL TRADE

Production Averages About 5% Under July Rate; Two Lines Very Active

By B. E. V. LUTY.

Steel ingot production is practically stationary, the rate being variously estimated at 52 to 54 per cent of capacity. While very precise estimates are frequently made, they are sometimes unfortunate in not being confirmed even with a couple of points by the official monthly reports of actual tonnage of ingots made.

It is reasonably accurate, and sufficiently close, to take it that, since the first of the month, production has averaged about 5 per cent under the July rate, and that there is no distinct upward or downward trend at the present time.

The percentage rate of production is interesting and important from the viewpoint of producers or sellers, furnishing a measure of one of the competitive conditions, but it is not a close index to total consumption, because producing capacity has increased so much, and even in good times capacity has usually not been fully engaged. Capacity has increased 13 per cent in four years. Since the war there have been only about six months in which production was at 95 per cent or more of actual physical capacity, in April, 1923, and during five months of last year.

Even actual tonnage output, apart from its percentage relationship to producing capacity, is not a close index to the state of business generally, because there are wide divergences in activity in different consuming lines. Two consuming activities are absorbing between 25 and 30 per cent of the current make of steel, a much larger proportion than they ever showed before. These two activities are the laying of pipe lines for natural gas, gasoline and oil and construction work involving the use of fabricated structural steel.

Shipments of the structural fabricating shops in July amounted to 304,000 net tons, and averaged 284,000 tons a month in the first six months of the year. The seven-month total is one-half of 1 per cent over the same period of last year, certainly an interesting showing.

Bookings in the seven months were 17 per cent under last year, but were above any previous year. The shops had their maximum order book last September, when they were estimated to be booked for five or six months. Since then their shipments have exceeded their bookings by about half a month of work, so that the order book is still quite large. At 300,000 net tons a month, this steel would represent consumption of about 14 per cent of the current ingot production, and the construction work involved includes in addition quite a consumption of concrete reinforcements as well as elevators, machinery, etc., in the case of buildings. Ordinary plate work, in tanks, stacks, etc., is not included in these statistics.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23. — New bond offerings during the week totaled $28,539,500, compared with $30,767,000 last week and $54,515,000 in the corresponding week last year.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

SCHOOL USES PRACTICAL METHOD

Students Gain Experience In Business Offices; Companies Co-operate

By GUY F. CUSTER.

Heretofore a thorough technical education in accountancy enabled the young man, without much difficulty to obtain a position in the business world along the lines he had been studying. Today the situation has changed so that a technical education, plus a certain experience in accounting, is almost necessary to the procuring of such a position. Many surveys in our larger cities permit this deduction.

Higher institutions of learning, in recognizing this situation have been working on the problem of teaching theory and practice, and giving experience at the same time. Pittsburgh School of Accountancy has evolved a plan for day school students which offers a solution to this problem.

VALUABLE CONTACTS

When a day school student has satisfactorily completed a major portion of the first semester of his freshman year, he has the option of being assigned to a business organization for practical experience five afternoons each week. Reporting at a designated hour, he works under the direct supervision of an office executive, without compensation, but under the regular rules and regulations of the office.

At the end of one month, the usual length of assgnment, a second assignment is made to an organization of a different type under entirely different conditions. This procedure is repeated each month during the remainder of the school year. In this manner, the student receives the benefit of considerable criticism, from a number of experienced executives, forms many valuable acquaintances in business offices, and gains considerable knowledge pertaining to office procedure and the best business practice. Frequently, students are asked to join these organizations at the close of the school year. In such cases, the student transfers to the evening school and continues his education without loss of time.

Output of Plate Glass Decreases

During July, 8,326,176 square feet of polished plate glass were produced in this country, according to figures released this week by P. A. Hughes, secretary of the Plate Glass Manufacturers of America. In comparison with the July, 1929, output of 13,057,098 square feet, a decline of over 4,730,000 square feet is shown. Compared with the June, 1930, production of 9,128,216 square feet the decrease was far less pronounced, however.

GENERAL TRADE DECLINES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Busines activity during the week ended August 16, as seen from bank debits, outside of New York City, showed decreases from both the preceding period and the week ended, August 17, 1929. Wholesale prices in general, although higher than a week ago, showed a decline of 14 per cent when compared with the same period a year ago. Iron and steel prices showed practically no change from the prices of the preceding week, but were considerably lower than in 1929.

The price of red winter wheat at Kansas City for the week of August 16 was higher than the preceding week but like all wholesale prices, was lower than last year.

Average prices for stocks declined from both prior periods. Bond prices, on the other hand, registered gains over both the previous week and the corresponding period in 1929. Interest rates for call money were higher than the preceding week, while time money rates recorded a decline. Both rates were lower than those ruling on August 17, 1929. Business failures during the past week were fewer than the period ending August 9, 1930.

Steel mill operation, bituminous coal production, petroleum output, and the number of building contracts awarded for the week ended August 9, 1930, were all lower than the preceding period. The receipts of wheat, cattle and hogs for the same week, however, showed increases when compared with the same period.

Expansion Continued By Atlantic

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

ATLANTIC REFINING COMPANY has continued to add to distribution and production facilities in spite of the decline in general business activity and the curtailment of earnings in the first half of this year.

The pamphlet report for the six months ended June 30, 1930, shows net profit of $2,818,823 after taxes, depreciation, depletion and interest. This was equivalent to $1.05 a share on 2,696,581 shares of common stock. It compared with $8,862,409 or $3.67 a share on 2,222,222 shares in the first half of 1929.

While earnings were reduced during the first half of the year, they were large enough to cover dividend requirements for the period by a slight margin. At present the stock pays regular dividends of 25 cents a share and extras of 25 cents a share each quarter. This is equivalent to an annual rate of $2.

Plant Additions Made

IMPROVEMENTS TO REFINING and distributing facilities during the six months amounted to $5,103,113. A large share of this was spent in the Pittsburgh district. About a year ago the company started to sell its products in this territory. Since that time the organization has become an important factor in the distribution of gasoline and oil here. The last move consisted in the acquisition of the distributing system of the Waverly Oil Works Company. It is understood that this was not reflected in the six month report since it took place at a later date.

Production facilities have also been expanded. The company's investment in oil lands and leaseholds was increased about $1,000,000 during the six months. On June 30, 1930, the investment in plants and equipment totaled $89,478,668 after deducting depreciation of $53,861,999. The investment in oil lands and leases reached $7,079,443 after reserves for depletion and amortization of $4,847,281.

Other Investments Gain

ATLANTIC REFINING also increased its investments in other directions. Money put into other companies showed a gain of $2,884,428. The company also showed an investment of $1,210,558 in treasury stock. This is a gain of $162,636 for the six months and an increase of the full amount of the investment since the end of 1928. While this represents the company's holdings of its own common stock it is impossible to determine the number of shares, since no statement has been made as to the price at which this investment is carried.

These large expenditures for improved operating facilities have reduced working capital this year but the company is still in an enviable financial position. Current assets on June 30, 1930, amounted to $56,405,307 against current liabilities of only $6,383,991. Cash of $6,323,888 was nearly equal to all current liabilities. The company also held United States Government and other marketable securities amounting to $2,308,129.

Funded Debt Small

FUNDED DEBT IS SMALL when compared to the size of the properties controlled. It amounted to only $14,158,758 against total assets which reached $165,091,352. No preferred stock is outstanding.

The company recently started a new marketing policy. Tires were added to the products distributed through the organization's service stations. This was first tried in the Pittsburgh district through the stations of Standard Oil of Pennsylvania, a subsidiary. It has met with such success that the entire distributing chain is starting to sell tires.

GEN. BRONZE'S BACKLOG UP

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Unfilled orders of General Bronze Corporation, largest maker of architectural metal products in the world, were more than $6,500,000 on August 1, compared with approximately $6,000,000 on January 1, Julius H. Barnes, president, announced today. Contracts booked during June showed a considerable increase over earlier months of the year when the company's new business declined with general operations in the building industry, Mr. Barnes said. Sales made in July and to the middle of August were at the rate of $1,000,000 a month or practically equal to the aggregate capacity of the company's seven plants.

Renwar Involved In Warner Suit

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 23.—The suit filed by Ira L. Nelson against Warner Brothers Pictures also names Renwar, Inc., as a defendant.

The suit criticizes the management of the company and alleges that the defendants permitted sums of money to be paid by Warner Brothers Pictures to Renwar, Inc., for the purchase of real estate leases and theaters at excessive prices.

Nelson asked that a receiver be appointed, that the defendants be compelled to explain their actions in the administration of the company's affairs, that Warner Brothers be enjoined from purchasing real estate and theaters from Renwar, Inc., and that Warner Brothers be enjoined from paying any further dividends on the preferred or common stock.

U. S. BUSINESS FRESHENS UP

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—General trade throughout the United States, discounting drought doubts, has freshened since the first of the month and commodity prices are decidedly firmer, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ending today. Bears have made little headway in any markets.

Business apparently hit a second bottom at the beginning of August, just a year after it went over the top in 1929. Since the beginning of August there has been little change, but indications are that a slow up-pull has set in. The Business Index, with its final figures steady at 86.5 per cent of normal for two weeks, rose a trifle to 86.9 per cent this week.

Industrial activity is still stagnant, but has reached resistance levels, despite the astonishing slackness of seasonal forward buying in wholesale lines which is leaving retail shelves bare.

Whether the business recovery from now on is to be slow or fast, only seasonal or permanent, is now chiefly a question of revival of individual initiative and aggressiveness which has been weakened in the past few months by repeated disappointment in miracles and by defeatist doctrines.

W. M. PROFITS SLIGHTLY OFF

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Drought in Maryland so far has had little effect on the revenues of the Western Maryland Railway. Truck gardens have been injured, and revenues from the movement of vegetables, which are relatively unimportant, have been reduced, but shipments of cattle, poultry and grain are as heavy as, or heavier than, in the corresponding 1929 period.

Gross revenues of Western Maryland for the current year to August 7 are estimated at $10,828,490, against $10,954,448 in the corresponding 1929 period, a decline of $125,958, or slightly more than 1 per cent. Showing for the period is much better than that of most railroads. It reflects the comparatively active business conditions in the area tapped by the road.

For the week ended August 7, revenues are estimated at $359,040, compared with $394,102 in the 1929 week, a drop of approximately 9 per cent. This was due largely to the slowing up in coal movement, which in preceding weeks had held up well. For the latest reported week, revenues from coal traffic were at $136,842, off approximately 11 per cent from the corresponding 1929 week, while for the year so far coal revenues totaled $4,798,278, off less than 2 per cent from the preceding period figure.

POSTER FIRM DEVELOPS FIELD

Liberty Show Printing Extends Activities to Realm of Commerce

The Liberty Show Printing Company is an unusual concern, specializing in the art of poster reproduction with an international reputation in the amusement field and Tri-state sales contracts with commercial advertisers. One of Pittsburgh's oldest concerns, the Liberty Show Printing Company was established in 1875. The present management began in 1890 when Edward L. Smith assumed control.

All traveling amusements carry their own posters and every year thousands of posters are stocked and shipped a week in advance for all varieties of shows all over the United States and Canada and occasionally to England from Pittsburgh. The class of show printing ranges from show boats and tent shows to the largest circuses and musical revues.

RAPID DEVELOPMENT

Within the last 10 years manufacturing facilities have been developed to make commercial posters, car cards and window displays for advertisers who have limited use for such advertising as well as for firms that advertise nationally.

With a steady demand for posters and window displays from tri-state advertisers, the original wood engraving printing methods were modernized to a point where today the Liberty Show Printing Company is making posters in small editions so cleverly that even skilled advertising managers cannot tell the difference of reproduction from lithography.

STUDENT INSPECTION

This newly developed commercial business has made the Liberty Show Printing Company one of the outstanding poster printing houses in America.

During the school term the students from Carnegie Tech printing school and practically all other advertising classes of the city are taken through the Liberty Show Printing plant in the Plate Glass Building, and are given practical demonstrations and lectures.

OPTIMISM OVER OIL OUTLOOK EXPRESSED

Improved Conditions For Second Half-Year Seen By Barnsdall President

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.

Optimism concerning the outlook for the oil industry for the remainder of the year has been expressed by E. B. Reeser, president of Barnsdall Corporation and chief executive of the American Petroleum Institute.

In a message to this column Mr. Reeser pointed out:

Mr. Rukeyser.

"The outlook for the producing end of the oil industry for the second half of 1930 is exceedingly good. The refining division is putting its house in order and it is probable that it will show some improvement. The distributing division will not show any improvement.

"The producing branch of the industry has improved its condition in that it is now producing 500,000 barrels less per day than it did a year ago. It is probable that further progress will be made in the curtailment movement. The utilization plan will spread and become a permanent policy of the industry. No changes in the law are necessary to make the contemplated plans effective."

BLAMES INDEPENDENTS

Asked whether present gasoline prices yield a profit, Mr. Reeser said:

"Present gasoline prices do not permit a profit to the refiners. The present depression in refined prices is due more largely to a battle between the smaller independent companies in an attempt on their part to increase the volume of their business. The present prices are below cost. The situation will be corrected as soon as these units realize that the crude situation is strong and that it will cost them more money to replenish their stocks, than that at which they are now selling their products."

As for the conservation movement, Mr. Reeser added:

"The conservation movement is 'voluntary,' but nevertheless, it is real and substantial. Present costs for drilling wells positively demand higher prices for crude oil. Producers seem to realize this and they are, therefore, glad to co-operate in the curtailment movement. There is no danger of an oil shortage during the life of the present generation, but higher prices are inevitable."

A spokesman for one of the largest integrated oil companies in a message to this column said:

"In view of the enormous potential production of both crude oil and gasoline, the industry is indeed fortunate in finding itself in a position where the production of these two products is today fairly well balanced with the demand. Because there is overproduction, one is justified in believing that there will be an indefinite continuance and expansion of this conservation movement. The greatest progress towards stabilization in the industry has been made by the producers of crude oil, but in my opinion the good work accomplished there may be undone if it is not followed up with stabilization in the refining and marketing end of the business.

"You ask if there is a needless duplication in retail outlets. From the viewpoint of serving the public, this is absolutely true and yet there seems to be no way by which this may legally be avoided in this highly competitive situation.

STABILIZATION NEEDED

"You ask if present gasoline prices allow sufficient profit margin. In my opinion present gasoline prices would allow a very satisfactory profit margin if the industry could realize the enormous saving which could be made through orderly and stabilized refining and marketing. Gasoline is only one product of crude petroleum, and while it is a large part of a barrel of crude oil and the most valuable part, at the same time a refiner's margin is what he gets for all the products from a barrel of crude oil as related to his cost for that barrel. There are some places where gasoline prices do not afford a sufficient profit margin. Stabilization in refining and marketing, if accomplished would, I think, quickly correct all such matters and it could be accomplished without any material advance throughout the country in the present gasoline prices to the consumer.

"Continuous improvement in refining methods is constantly increasing the percentage of gasoline produced from a barrel of crude. For that reason, when the time comes, if it ever does, that there is what you name 'an oil shortage,' there will, in my opinion, be processes of making gasoline and lubricating oils sufficient to meet all requirements. Twenty years ago a 3,000-foot well was wondered at as being very deep. Today one well has been completed at a depth of 9,500 feet. As between the drill and improved refining processes, I cannot see a real shortage of petroleum for generations to come."

GIRL'S CHARGES HOLD MAN

Andrew Haney, 35, of 286 Wade street, was held for a jury trial by Magistrate J. J. O'Connor in Morals Court today, on charges of entering a building, assault and battery and a morality charge.

Haney was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Miss Ivy Thornton, 38, of 286 Wade street, who charged that Haney entered her room Friday morning, August 8, choked and threatened to kill her and then attacked her.

Haney, denying the charges, stated Miss Thornton was a victim of illness and the bruises on her body were the result of falling through a window a few weeks previously.

Fletcher is from Pennsylvania. His home is at Greencastle.

Parisians Poor Poetry Writers

PARIS.—(INS.)—Parisians are not poets, think the 40 Immortals of the celebrated Academie Francaise. The three hundred and more contributions sent in by as many poets for the contest on "Youth" were so mediocre that the Academy decided to offer no prize at all and have postponed the contest until next year.

Heart Attack Fatal To Africa Explorer

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Dr. H. Karl William Kumm, first white man to traverse the north central African divide between Congo Shari and the Nile, died here yesterday. The geographical researcher, born in Hanover, Germany, was the victim of heart disease resulting from an African fever, physicians said, contracted in his work.

Americans Shun Bar, Stay Dry on Cruise

NEW YORK.—Not even the temptations of a six-day "cruise to nowhere" aboard a trans-Atlantic liner, with its bars open and "the real stuff" available at prices from a quarter to a half of the onshore cost of similarly labeled but often false tipples to bootleggers' patrons, can break down America's acquired habits of prohibition.

Nearly 450 of the 719 passengers who returned to this port aboard the Cunarder California, completing such a cruise, shunned throughout the excursion the beverages forbidden under the Volstead Act.

Pass Hat to Keep Municipal Concerts

UPLAND.—Although two-thirds of the voting public have cast their ballots against municipal band concerts next summer, at the recent municipal election, they will enjoy the weekly concerts, nevertheless.

Upland's municipal band, under leadership of Fred Wilding, Jr., is one of the outstanding assets of Upland community, and rather than mourn the passing of a good band, the minority passed the hat, and the concerts will go on.

Paris Soon to Build 20,000 Apartments

PARIS.—The housing problem is about to be relieved in Paris by the construction of 20,000 apartments, according to plans just accepted by the municipal council here.

This problem, already acute, forced the city to take action, which it has done in conjunction with private interests, to erect these new apartment houses. Both the wealthy and the poor will benefit by this building program.

Australia Balks At Airway Cost

Oil Well Supply Stock Selling Out of Line With Steel

Oil Well Supply stock seems to be marking time waiting for announcement that the United States Steel Corporation will exercise its option to take over the property. On the basis of the statement already made, the stock is selling out of line with Steel common. This fact has kept down liquidation even while the general list was reactionary in the past 10 days or two weeks. The option held by the Steel Corporation expires next Monday unless there is an extension, and the belief is general in the financial district that it will be exercised. Oil Well will make a valuable addition to the steel organization, as it will give a controlled outlet for pipe production.

Waldorf System stock has been working quietly higher recently on an average turnover of only about 3,000 shares weekly. Buying of the common has been based on the outlook for eventual retirement of the preferred. Long-pull accumulation of the common has also been actuated by the success obtained by the aggressive policies of the management headed by J. J. Curry. Since Mr. Curry became president of Waldorf, sales and earnings have increased substantially, and a conservative expansion program out of earnings has been inaugurated.

Wall Street was strongly disposed to place bullish interpretation upon the $27,000,000 contraction reported in loans for the past week. The financial community had been pretty well primed for a moderate increase notwithstanding the fact that the market's advance in the period covered by the loan report was very generally accepted as resulting largely from covering in of short commitments. The actual figures, however, revealing a further reduction in the total of borrowings was seized upon in most circles as evidence of considerable investment buying. Some folks, however, were not quite so optimistically inclined, the view in the latter quarters being that the reduction probably was accounted for in a large measure by the liquidation of some frozen bond loans made possible by sustained improvement in the investment market.

Tobacco shares were the center of a brisk wave of buying along about noon yesterday immediately following the publication of the July report on cigaret production for July and the first seven months of the year. Output of all domestic manufacturers increased by about 1,134,138,751 cigarets over the same month last year, while for the seven months the increase for the industry was 2,031,030,000 cigarets. American Tobacco Company's leading brand recorded a gain of 582,000,000 in the month, while its gain for the first seven months was 3,539,000,000 cigaret compared with the above figure for that period covering all products.

If for no other reason than that such activity is scarcely necessary under prevailing conditions, the Federal Reserve is doing little or nothing which might tend to influence the money situation. This week's condition statement of the system shows an increase of about $5,300,000 in the total of bills and securities. The increase reflects the expansion of about $6,000,000 in holdings of rediscounted bills and of about $4,000,000 in holdings of open market bills, these gains having been offset in a measure by a slight contraction in the system's holdings of government securities. Total gold reserves ran off about $7,000,000 in the week and stood about $16,000,000 under the aggregate for the same period a year ago. Member banks in New York City are shown to be still out of debt to the reserve, whereas they were borrowing $144,000,000 from the regional bank this time in 1929.

Most observers are not inclined to look for much change in the market situation until the approaching summer-end holiday is out of the way. But it is expected that within a fortnight there will be evidence of considerable shifting of the market scenes and a decidedly stronger effort to get the market out of the woods, so to speak. "If there is one thing that Wall street cannot stand," said a man of many years' experience in the financial district, "it is indecision and inactivity." He then went on to point out that the summer holiday will be completed with the passing of Labor Day a week from Monday. "And," he concluded, "my 40 years in this vicinity have shown me that everyone down here takes off his coat and gets down to real work with the beginning of September."

MARKET OPENS IRREGULARLY HIGHER

Trading Quiet at Start Of Week's Last Session; Radio Gains, Steel Loses

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Share prices moved irregularly higher in a quiet opening of the stock market today. Such shares as Radio, Radio Keith, Sears Roebuck, International Telephone, Loews, American Tobacco B, New York Central and Bethlehem Steel gained ⅜ to ¾. U. S. Steel sold off ¼, then quickly recorded a gain of ½. International Nickel jumped ¾ with a transaction of 8,000 shares. Gillette lost a point, and Atchison and Columbia Gas sagged ¾.

The mildly cheerful tenor of the weekly trade reviews, Secretary Mellon's statement that there is "real hope" of continuance of the income tax reduction, and the refusal of speculative quarters to attach any considerable importance to the equity action against Warner Brothers, all helped the bull cause, and stock gains of a point or more were numerous at the end of the first half hour.

Such issues as U. S. Steel, General Electric and Radio gained only fractionally, but advances of 1 to 1½ were recorded by American Can, New York Central, Chicago Northwestern, Fox, Standard Gas, Electric Power and Light, Byers, United Aircraft and Hershey. Diamond Match mounted a point to a new high. Case sold up nearly 2 and International Combustion preferred 3. Sinclair sagged on its earnings statement.

Trading, however, was quiet. Speculators for the rise showed little disposition to exert themselves before the weekend closing. In fact, many traders failed to come into town for the Saturday session.

Kroger Makes Deal With Sears Roebuck

Albert H. Morrill, president of Kroger Grocery, says these two departments will be operated by Kroger as an experiment and if successful will lead to the establishment of similar departments in other Sears stores.

National Fireproofing Sells Higher; Plants Are Busy Supplying New Products

Trading was at low ebb in the Pittsburgh stock market, with many of the brokers absent on vacations. The short session was characterized by few price changes of any importance.

National Fireproofing opened up $1 from the previous sale. The company is reported to be operating its plants at unusually good rate considering general conditions in the building industry. Several of the company's new products have met with a favorable reception, particularly the new tile being used in modern power line conduits.

American Austin Car and Liberty Dairy common sold a fraction higher. Pennsylvania Industries Units, an investment trust including many of the Hillman properties, traded unchanged.

Earnings of the United Engineering and Foundry Company were reported as running around $2.50 a share for the half, but there was no activity in the stock.

Sinclair Oil Net Reduced for Half

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation reports first-half net earnings of $3,251,709, equal to 49 cents per common share, compared with $6,196,194, or $1.01 per common share, in the like period of 1929. A statement by the company attributed lessened profits to unsatisfactory prices prevailing during the period and to generally unfavorable business conditions.

Extensive drilling was necessary in the Oklahoma City field, involving large expense, but owing to proration the corporation was unable to realize on this investment, since the flow of the wells is limited to a small fraction of developed production. No effect is given in the above figures from the acquisition of the Pierce Petroleum properties which only became effective July 1.

OVERHEAD HITS ENAMELING PROFITS

Current Cash Position Strong And Firm Is Prepared To Enter Color Field

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The net loss of $13,542 shown by National Enameling and Stamping Company for the first six months of 1930 was in a measure foreshadowed by the action of directors in June in suspending payment of the common dividend, which was at a $2 annual rate.

Enameling earned $1.05 a share on the 155,918 outstanding shares of capital stock in the first half of 1929 with sales of $6,437,245. This year, sales amounted to $5,317,239, a decline of 17.4 per cent, but operating profit dropped to $73,801 from $349,232, a decline of nearly 79 per cent.

The price situation obviously has been largely responsible for the smaller earnings. Alfred J. Kieckhefer, president, said that while prices held fairly well at the beginning of the year, in the last two months the situation has been unsatisfactory. Unit sales were smaller than for several years, which helped to increase distribution and handling costs. Plants were operated at about 50 per cent of capacity throughout the first half year, so the proportion of overhead to sales was larger than a year ago.

SUBSTANTIAL ASSETS

Notwithstanding the unsatisfactory earnings statement for the past six months, National Enameling stock is in a sound position from an equity standpoint. The balance sheet as of June 30, last, shows current assets of $5,013,419 against current liabilities of $436,198. On December 31, 1929, the figures were $5,544,055 and $853,707, respectively. Equity of the company's capital stock in working capital is above $29 a share compared with current market price on the New York Stock Exchange of around $23.

On this basis, market valuation of National Enameling capitalization is $3,586,114, only slightly more than June 30 inventories of $3,312,767, which alone are equal to more than $6 a share and receivables equal to $4.85 a share. This leaves property, equipment, patents, goodwill, etc., which are carried on the balance sheet at $13,244,286, without any market valuation. Book value of the stock is nearly $116 a share.

CASH ACCOUNT LARGER

Cash account has been improved during the last six months, standing at $942,983 on June 30 against $606,318 on December 31, 1929. Inventories were reduced by more than $600,000. The 155,918 capital shares are the only capital or funded obligation of the company.

Stocks of enameled ware in dealers' hands are reported as unusually low at present, so with any revival in general trade there should be an almost immediate reflection in the company's business. National Enameling recently has completed an improvement program providing for the manufacture of white and colored enameled wares in addition to the grey ware already manufactured. The company is the largest maker of grey ware, and the management feels that the addition of colored ware should strengthen Enameling's position in the industry.

Triplex Patents Upheld in Court

United States Circuit Court for Western Pennsylvania has granted the Triplex Safety Glass Corporation a permanent injunction restraining the Duplate Corporation, subsidiary of the Plate Glass Company, from making laminated safety glass under methods covered by the Triplex patents.

Officials of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company stated that they have not been using this process for several months. At present they are making laminated glass by a new method which is not under dispute in the patent litigation.

VALLEY STEEL OUTPUT GAINS

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 23.—For the last week in August, iron and steel companies in the Youngstown district will enlarge activities moderately, especially in flat rolled steel divisions.

In steel pipe departments, the past two weeks have developed enlarged backlogs, thus improving the position of producers in this area. The order taken by Youngstown Sheet and Tube from the Central Public Service Corporation, Chicago, involves 35,000 tons of tubing.

Improved buying by automobile companies is benefiting flat steels and will accelerate operation of such plants. One of the principal beneficiaries in this division will be Republic Steel, whose properties at Niles and Warren will accelereate.

While Empire Steel Corporation has been concentrating operations at Mansfield, its Mahoning Valley plants have been forced into idleness. Improved tonnages likely to develop in the fall will therefore be of material benefit to the Valley units.

SWIFT SUICIDE LAID TO SHAME

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—The theory that William E. Swift, son of the Chicago packer, committed suicide last Saturday night because he dreaded to go home and face his old associates, was advanced yesterday by Dr. Edward S. Cowles, in whose sanitarium Swift killed himself.

Dr. Cowles said Swift arrived at the hospital suffering from pressure on the brain because of prolonged excessive drinking, and for three months was confined to bed. The patient, he said, was allowed considerable freedom as he recovered his health, and did not take a single drink until a week before his death.

Dr. Cowles said that on the night before tests were to be held to determine whether Swift had recovered and could be discharged, the patient did take some beer. The physician said that when asked why he did so, the patient replied:

"I am afraid to leave here. I love my family and would like to be with them, but I am afraid to face my old friends. They will see me only as I was."

FIND 2,508,151 IDLE IN U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—A total of 2,508,151 able-bodied Americans, comprising two per cent of the country's population, were listed today by the Census Bureau as unemployed last April and looking for work.

The total was announced on the basis of preliminary returns from every section of the country. The bureau explained that six other classes of unemployed were not included in the present tally, but added that those "without a job, able to work and looking for a job" unquestionably constituted the bulk of those to be listed as unemployed.

Brushton Perchers In Tree 934 Hours

Brushton's four tree sitters were still going strong today after 934 hours off the ground, and are more confident than ever of establishing an undisputed record before they come down.

The boys, Robert, James and Lawrence Grively, and their cousin, Samuel King, have been in the air since July 16. Their nests are in the branches of two trees in the rear of 631 Sickles street.

Oil Price Increase Cheers Operators

FRANKLIN, Pa., Aug. 23.—Increase of 25 cents in the price of Pennsylvania crude oil, the first in a year, heartened independent oil producers in Northwestern Pennsylvania and Southern New York yesterday. Efforts are being made to extend the present 30 per cent curtailment to October 1 and if this succeeds, another rise within a month may result, operators feel.

Chinese Dragon To Be Displayed At Schenley

A Chinese dragon, three feet long, a species not often seen in this country, will be on exhibition at Schenley conservatory tomorrow. It will be one of the exhibits of the show of tropical fish, snakes and lizards put on by the Allegheny Aquarists Association. The show will last one week. There will be more than 100 varieties of tropical fish to be seen. William Stewart is head of the show committee.

EARNINGS DROP BELOW LEVEL OF 1927

Decline in Second Quarter Puts Corporate Profits Down for Many Firms

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Aggregate corporation earnings for the first half year have fallen to approximately 1927 levels, on the basis of reports of 193 companies for which comparisons are available. Total net earnings of these 193 industrial companies in the first half of 1930 were $50,412,000, compared with $754,344,000 in the corresponding 1929 period, $582,788,000 in 1928, and $523,226,000 in 1927.

These figures reveal how sharply profits fell during the second quarter. Comparison of first quarter earnings with those of previous years was considerably more favorable. According to a compilation by Federal Reserve Bank of New York, aggregate profits of 257 industrial companies the first quarter of this year were $317,793,000, or 5 per cent above the $303,354,000 total reported for the corresponding 1928 period.

Three-year comparison figures, available for 253 companies for the first half year, show aggregate earnings this year of $571,997,000, or 33 per cent below the 1929 total of $851,378,000, and 12 per cent below the 1928 figure of $651,220,000.

Best comparative showings were made by the electrical equipment, chemical, steel and food groups, while the industries most seriously hit were automobile and mining. The automobile equipment business was not nearly as seriously affected by the business slump as was the automobile industry itself.

Of the 193 companies for which four-year comparisons are available, 47 reported larger profits in the first half of 1930 than in the 1929 period. Half of the food and food product companies and half the railroad equipment concerns reported larger profits this year than last.

Eighty-four of the companies reported larger earnings this year than in 1928, and 85 companies bettered their 1927 figures. All the electric equipment and chemical companies reported larger earnings this year than in 1927, while nine of the 14 food companies showed higher profits. On the other hand, only six of the 16 steels, none of the four tire companies and only two of the 13 automobile companies showed larger profits this year than three years ago.

Liquor law violations were reported discovered in each.

Carlowski and Fontanelli, agents say, were discovered pushing a cart loaded with six cases of home brew in Mulberry way.

'Village Blacksmith' Of Carmichaels Dies

WAYNESBURG, Aug. 23.—"Lane" Hunnell, 72, for many years the "village blacksmith" at Carmichaels, is dead at his home after a long illness. For 50 years Hunnell was a member of the former Carmichaels military band and during the half century never missed playing in a Memorial Day parade.

Whale in Inland Harbor Escapes After Battle

The whale was discovered in a log pond which it had reached through miles of inland waters. Jimmy Freeman, log-rolling expert, drove a harpoon into the giant mammal, tied it to a log raft. The whale then was shot 10 times.

The wounded mammal struggled back to the bay, dragging the raft with it. Boatsmen gave it wide berth as it threshed about the harbor.

When its struggles ceased the whale was anchored to a light buoy. Just as observers decided the mammal was dead, it revived and rushed for deep waters.

TRUCK DRIVER CUT IN CRASH

Walter Lindsay, 22, of 240 Oneida street, was reported in critical condition from loss of blood in South Side Hospital today, as a result of being hurled through the windshield of a truck when he lost control in Woodruff street, Mt. Washington, last night.

The truck, owned by Ralph Cannon, of Watkins lane, plunged into a ditch. Cannon, in another machine, rushed Lindsay to Mt. Washington Police Station for first aid and then to the hospital.

Two youths were injured this morning when their automobile skidded against another car at North avenue and Arch street. They are Russell Roup, 17, of 505 South Highland avenue, and Judson Kline, 18, of Hampton Hall apartments, Dithridge street. Roup, driver, suffered a broken leg. Kline was cut and bruised.

Two youths whose automobile crashed through the front door of the John A. Scott furniture store at Penn avenue and Beatty street, after the driver became confused by the whistle of a traffic policeman, were being held today in East End Police Station. They are Scott Howe, 19, of 251 Eighth avenue, West Homestead, and Arthur Weaver, 22, of the same address. They had just purchased their machine, a second-hand automobile. Damage to the store was $500, police reported.

J. W. Haskins, 38, of 907 Beech avenue, North Side, escaped injury today when a milk truck he was driving was struck by an automobile and overturned at Second avenue and Brady street. He reported the motorist abandoned his automobile and fled. Police arrested Michael Huluska, of 5019 Langhorn street, as the other driver.

HUNGARY ALERT FOR OTTO COUP

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Official denial by authorities that the former Empress Zita and her son Otto, pretender to the Hungarian throne, had returned to Budapest to undertake a coup d'etat failed today to quiet excitement occasioned by the reports.

Despite denials of Otto's return police guarded public buildings and other strategic positions. Once when a woman dressed in black and a boy of about 18 years appeared on the streets in an automobile they were stopped on suspicion, but proved to be ordinary Budapest residents.

The police suppressed publication of the rumor that Otto, clad in a priest's robe, had arrived at the same time as a large delegation of priests from a seminary in Belgium, where he has been in school.

Premier Bethlen and other ministers have given repeated assurances that Hungary will proceed to the restoration of the monarchy only with the full consent of the western powers.

Pittsburgher Sails For Tour Abroad

Harris to Take Part In Road Ceremony

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 23.—State Senator Frank J. Harris has accepted an invitation to take part in "Pennsylvania Day on the National Highway" celebration, here September 25, incident to the reopening of the National pike after new construction work.

Central Station Scene of Style Exhibit

A fine array of suits, dresses, lingerie and store dummies was to be seen in Central Police Station this morning, but only for a short time. Police then packed them off to the owner of a Fifth avenue store who after closing up last night, went home without making certain his display case at the store entrance was locked. Police discovered the case unlocked and for safety's sake, took the goods to the police station.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN
Radio Editor

The radio evening augurs well with a special celebration for Secretary James J. Davis on KDKA at 5:30, the Mendelssohn Choir of 2,000 voices on KDKA at 8:30, from Toronto, Canada, and 22 massed bands in the Chicagoland Music Festival over KDKA at 10:30.

Will Osborne's in the city for a special engagement at a local roadhouse and accordingly WJAS will handle his coast to coast broadcast from 10:45 to 11:30 o'clock.

Will Osborne

The "King of Crooners" is a democratic chap but right now it is pretty hard to get much out of him that does not pertain to his fiance, Margaret Eckdahl, "Miss America, 1930," whom he will salute in tonight's program.

"Yes, I'll sing to her," Osborne admitted this morning. "I'm sorry she couldn't come along, but she's doing vaudeville in Gloversville, N. Y. She'll listen tonight. They say it was my voice that first attracted the Miami beauty. Anyway she wrote me quite a few letters, our friendship grew and we're going to be married."

Miss Eckdahl

Osborne would not say what he intended singing but we put odds on "I'm Following You."

Allah's Holiday" by a women's octet is the stellar offering on WCAE'S "Pop" concert from New York at 8 p. m.

DO YOU KNOW—

THAT the electrical transcriptions (phonograph records) used in radio broadcasts carry a written continuity that must be studied beforehand by the announcer handling the program? This makes a 15-minute broadcast of this sort harder to handle than an hour symphony concert from the studio, say local announcers.

THAT Don Bestor is now playing at WENR?

THAT announcers and individual artists sit in small booths inside the studio on network programs from Chicago? Once a program is started no one is allowed to enter or leave the studio.

THAT a daytime program by Tampa on WCAE was heard clearly in Long Island?

THAT an Arizona fan spent $11 the other night to tell KDKA she had heard them that far west?

THAT Victor Saudek has recovered from his fractured leg and is walking about again?

THAT three microphones are used to pick up the William Penn Orchestra broadcast?

ARE YOU MAD, TOO?

Thousands of Pittsburgh fans are belligerent over the sudden switch in the NBC program Thursday night which canceled Victor Herbert Opera for a meeting of the American Bar Association.

We can't blame KDKA listeners for tearing loose with letters to our department on an occasion like this.

"Why didn't the network or the local station make some announcement of this change early in the evening so we could go to bed?" advises Walter Guedeman. "Certainly the change must have been made after edition time or it would have been mentioned in the Sun-Telegraph radio pages, they're always up to the minute on these things. I'll bet thousands of people in Pittsburgh stayed up to hear the opera and what a disappointment it must have been when Graham McNamee opened up at 10 p. m. by introducing a long winded speaker who had nothing to say of interest to the average listener."

We wouldn't say that Attorney Wickersham's speech was as bad as all that, but we can froth at the mouth with you on the sudden switch in programs because we, too, listened for Victor Herbert opera. As on past occasions of this kind, we have sent the National Broadcasting Company a wire demanding on the part of our readers that they make some mention earlier in the evening of important changes.

We thought our resolution at the National radio show had been productive of some good until we, too, were stung the other night.

If you are incensed as much as we just sharpen your pencil and dash off a letter to the National Broadcasting Company, 711 Fifth avenue, New York. That will help.

The Loudspeaker

The Good Old Days.
Gershwin's March.
Russian Complex.
Can't Beat Sousa.

By LOUIS REID

In airing the broadcasting possibilities of present-day American civilization, the monarchs of the microphone do not intend to neglect the picturesque past of of the republic.

Louis Reid

Sentimental journeys to an earlier nation are being regularly listed in the radio logs, with the result, they say, that the cretonned cogswell are a more potent lure than ever.

The broadcasters, in their new enterprise, are shedding, thank Allah, no misty regrets for the good old days. Rather are they confining themselves to an accurate reflection of the humor and gusto and childlike charm of American life before sophistication set her high and handsome heels upon us.

Recording Old-Time American Life

They deserve a great big ear and a great big hand. They will get both, if our skill at crystal-gazing has not deserted us. The great American novel may still lie in the lap of destiny, but much of the material which conceivably would form the background of the great American novel is available to the air waves.

The radio men have put their restless fingers upon it in the expectation that the armchairs will listen, and listening, absorb some of the cheering contentment of those days when money was not yet a god and there was leisure in the land.

There are many glamorous phases of the age of innocence which could be set down before the microphones with little research necessary for the task. Fiddlers' contests, once the chief excitement of the countryside; pioneers' picnics, held annually for those hardy souls who had hewn out homes in wildernesses; the quilting parties of New England, the Saturday night concerts of a thousand village bands, the old square dances which provided farmers temporary freedom from the plow, the ice cream socials of the evangelical churches—all could be transferred easily and accurately to the loudspeakers.

Turning the gaze from the homespun side of America and toward the manners and morals of the town, of, say, New York in the pre-wisecreak, speakeasy era, the broadcasters are also confronted with infinite material for the radio. They might not have to go farther back than the days of "Floradora" to find a colorful panorama awaiting them.

Pre-Speakeasy Town Not Yet Given to Air

They might recapture something of the spirit of the great and gay restaurants of the day, of the Great White Way itself, bounded on the east by Jack's and on the west by Rector's. They might reincarnate some of the incredible spenders of the Waldorf, the astonishing chefs of the Forties. New York, prior to the reign of Wilson, could provide a radio holiday of infinite charm and amusement.

George Gershwin's "Strike Up the Band" is the best march written in the republic since Edwin Franko Goldman turned out "On the Mall." We have no doubt it will figure largely in the repertories of every band that aspires to Main street sore feet.

Russians Now Form Imposing Radio March

Exiled Russian vocalists and balalaika players form a continuous parade to the microphones. Were all the Russians now appearing on the radio in the republic assembled for a march in Moscow, it would take five hours for them to pass the reviewing stand of Joseph Stalin.

The Russians go in chiefly for the sombre music of their natie land, with special emphasis upon the "Song of the Volga Boatmen." Their voices are invariably deep and resonant and they can tickle Tschaikowsky out of their guitars as easily as a Kentucky fiddler can coax "Pop Goes the Weasel."

Were the entire list of Sousa's marches to be presented in one program we would have to sacrifice the better part of five hours. More than 100 marches have issued from his pen, the most enduring being the "Stars and Stripes Forever," "Semper Fidelis," "Washington Post" and "El Capitan." Next to these, which bear the Sousa label, the most inspiring marches to these ears, are, if you must know, "Pomp and Circumstance" of [illegible], the Turkish march from [illegible] "Ruins of Athens" and [illegible] Christian [illegible]."

Five records were broken as the juniors had their day in the National A. A. U. track and field championships at the Stadium yesterday. Johnny Morris, of Southwestern and Louisiana Institute, established a new mark by topping the tall timbers in 0:14.7. Ralph Metcalfe, Negro star representing Chase Park A. C., of Chicago, broke the 100-yard dash record when he reeled off the "century" in :09.7. A great finishing spurt enabled Raymond Sears, of the Big Four A. A., of Mattoon, Ill., to lower the mile record to 4:21.5. (Pictures of the other two-record-breaking performances will be found on Page 14.) A tragic note was introduced into the carnival when Joseph Poirer, Boston Y. M. C. A. broad jumper, was struck in the face with a discus thrown by Edward J. Wlodyka, of the Boston A. A. Poirer was removed from the field in an ambulance. The meet is to be continued today and Monday. The senior championships are on this afternoon.

SPORT COMMENT

Bowen Among Greatest.

Would Trade Collins.
Caldwell Defies Time.
District Boxing Boom.
Five Clubs May Operate.

WITHOUT RIVAL AS THREE-EVENT STAR

A PITTSBURGH PRODUCT is certain to remain prominently in the foreground of national and international amateur athletics as long as Reginald (Pete) Bowen continues in active competition. The former Pitt star, now wearing the colors of the New York A. C., is clearly entitled to a place among the greatest runners of his own or any other day. He may be nosed out now and then in the quarter mile, he may lose occasionally in the furlong, and once in a while somebody may breast the tape ahead of him in the hundred, but as an all-around performer and for class at all three distances, Bowen stands out beyond any contemporary on the American cinder paths.

Pete Bowen

Though he entered for only the quarter mile in the A. A. U.'s national championship meet at the Stadium, defending the title he won at Denver last year, Pete's greatness is not confined to the four-forty by any means. He is good enough to compete with the fastest of them in either the century or the two-twenty. He can run all three events in one afternoon and then show his heels to most of the boys at the hurdles in addition. Such versatility is rarely found in a foot-racer.

IT ISN'T THAT Bowen is merely "good" at the three distances. That might be said of a lot of runners. But the former Panther flier is mighty close to being of championship quality in each number. It is not uncommon to see one man beating the field in both the 100 and 220-yard events, but you'd have to do some tall hunting to find another who can, like Bowen, go on to the 440-yard competition and still be too fast for his rivals.

There has been some speculation as to what Pete could do if he were to give up the quarter mile, in which he rose to the national A. A. U. championship, and devote all his attention to the hundred. Some authorities express the opinion that he might approach the success of Frank Wykoff, who, when he dropped the two-twenty, succeeded in cutting down his 100-yard time to a new world record. Paavo Nurmi only voiced the views of many others, when, after seeing Bowen win first the 100-meter dash and then the 400-meter event in Abo this summer, he pronounced Pete the greatest short-distance runner he had ever seen. Another authority says it would not be too much to rank Bowen among the first eight men in the country at 100 yards, the first six at 220 and the first two at 440. Pete has well been called a one-man track team.

THOUGH NEITHER SIDE would admit that anything more than the weather had been discussed, it is said that the visit of Branch Rickey, Cardinal vice president, to Pittsburgh yesterday and his conference with Pirate officials, had to do with a possible Buccaneer deal for a player on one of the St. Louis club farms.

The player in question is First Baseman Jim Collins, of the Rochester club in the International League. The Pittsburgh club is reported to have manifested some interest in the slugging first-sacker. It is said that a Pirate scout looked him over recently and that Rickey came here to learn what the scout had reported and to find out what sort of bargain he could strike in the shape of a trade at the end of the season.

Branch Rickey

THAT THE CARDINALS are willing to dispose of Collins is indicated by Rickey's emphatic statement that they mean to keep First Baseman Jim Bottomley despite reports that the latter was to be placed on the block. Whether the Corsair management will consider paying anything like the price that Rickey is placing on him in playing material is doubtful, however. At that, Collins, looks like a good prospect on paper. He led the International League in home runs last season with 38, though hitting only .316. This year he has jumped his average to .390, has made 36 homers and knocked in 150 runs.

THE ACTION OF John McGraw in remaining away from his Giant club at this critical stage of the pennant fight, leaving it in the hands of Dave Bancroft during the Western trip, is said to have been due to a desire to be on the ground floor in New York while a new wrangle among the club stockholders, of whom he is one, was in progress. His visits to the Saratoga race track, it is said, were just "conveniently incidental."

According to report, the outcome of the latest squabble among the Giant owners is that Charles A. Stoneham now owns 61 per cent of the capital stock. He has acquired 250 more shares from a minority stockholder and says he has no intention of selling out. Three years ago he turned down an offer of $3,000,000 made by the late Tex Rickard. It is recalled that in 1895, Andrew Freedman obtained 51

A. A. U. MEET RESUMED AT STADIUM

A. C. and Ralph Metcalfe, the Negro star of Chicago, who yesterday set a new record in the junior 100, assures as remarkable a brand of sprinting as it ever has been this city's fortune to witness.

Tolan, defending both the 100 and 220-yard titles he won at Denver a year ago, must outrun the field afore mentioned if he is to retain his laurels.

His heart set on not only a victory today and the successful defense of his title and record, but on the establishment of a new world mark for the distance, R. F. (Pete) Bowen, former University of Pittsburgh quarter-mile star, national intercollegiate champion, will trade strides with a threatening field. Bowen, competing for the N. Y. C. A., freshly returned from a successful invasion of Europe, and with a flock of collegiate laurels adorning his brow, is confronted by a very tough assignment this afternoon.

It is useless to speculate on what may develop in the way of thrills and records in the pole vault, with Fred Sturdy and Tom Warne vaulting; in the shot put, with Paul Jessup and Harlow Rothert due to tangle; in the hurdles, with a brilliant field primed to wrest from Steve Anderson, champion University of Washington timber topper, the championships he took down last year; in the broad jump, where Ed Hamm, world champion, of Georgia Tech, risks his record and seeks to pocket the championship now in the possession of Ed Gordon, Iowa Negro, and in almost every other event, where finely drawn, perfectly trained fields await the call to arms, or, as the case may be, legs.

The goings-on will get under way promptly at 1:45. Tomorrow those athletes entered in the Showing a stride similar to that which marked their play when the long race started, the Pirates today were looking for more fields to conquer. That the daily play of Lloyd Waner has given the whole team smoothness of action, is the opinion of Manager Ens, the pitchers, too, profiting by new order.

The Oaklanders and Braves are slated to stage a doubleheader this afternoon, the first game to start at 2 o'clock. The bargain bill will bring to a close the seasonal visits to Forbes Field of the Eastern clubs.

WOOD, BRAME TO HURL

Skipper Ens announced this morning that he would use his new lefthander, Charley Wood, in one of the battles. Ervin Brame will draw the slab ticket for the other fight. Ens will try to arrange his slate in such a manner as to have Brame in action against righthand pitching.

The Buccos, on top of a victory over the Braves yesterday, have won four games in a row. They were defeated by the Robins in Brooklyn last Sunday, but after returning to the Oakland Orchard, they proceeded to smear the Robins twice in the same spot and then added two triumphs over the Boston athletes.

The Pirates will leave tonight for Cincinnati, where tomorrow they will stage a double-header with the Reds. The regular schedule called for games on Sunday and Monday, but the Cincinnati management requested the local officials to consent to a dual contest and the request was granted.

The Pirates are slated to play Monday in Terre Haute, the home of Coach Max Carey. From there they will move to Chicago to take on the Cubs in two contests. In the event of rain tomorrow, the Buccos would have to remain over in Cincinnati.

With Mrs. Smith and several children he had taken a cottage here for the season. The body will be taken to Pittsburgh Monday morning.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—The first woman's title ever offered by the National Public Parks Tennis Association was won yesterday by Mrs. Virginia Dueker, of St. Louis, who took the singles crown in the women's division by defeating Mrs. Ruth Martinez, Washington, 3-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Had it not been for the presence of 15-year-old Ethel Haas and Lydia Kayser, of Buffalo, Mrs. Dueker also would have shared the doubles title with her St. Louis partner, Ann Lindeman. She and her teammate were defeated by the Buffalo combination for the championship in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2.

JENNINGS NEARS TITLE

George Jennings, Chicago, defending singles champion in the men's division, continued on his way toward another title, entering the final by beating Arnold Simons, Louisville, in straight sets 6-2, 6-3, 6-3. He will oppose Dooly Mitchell, of Washington, for the title tomorrow afternoon.

Playing an all-court game, Mitchell smashed his way into the final with a four-set victory over Thomas Markey, Indianapolis, 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4.

The men's doubles title will be determined this afternoon after a morning round of semi-finals. Jennings, paired with Jack Delara, Los Angeles, gained the semi-finals by defeating Bob Elliott and Elmer Rudy, of Baltimore, 9-7, 6-2, 6-3.

In the upper bracket of the doubles, Eddie Novak, Buffalo, and Arnold Simons, Louisville, went into the semi-finals by a straight set victory over Gus Amsterdam and Milford Meyer, seeded number 2 team of Philadelphia. The other doubles match between Edgar Yeomans, Washington, and Markey and Jack Castle and Leo Kronman, Buffalo, ended in darkness with sets at 2-all.

ED FLANAGAN

One of the five new records turned in in the junior National A. A. U. meet at the Stadium yesterday was contributed by Ed Flanagan, of the Boston A. A., when he threw the hammer 162 feet 5 inches.

WALLACE MARTY

HARRY CARTER SETTING STEEPLECHASE RECORD

The last of the records to fall during an afternoon of torrid competition was the steeplechase, in which Harry Carter, of the Olympic Club, emerged with a new mark of 10:59.8. Carter is shown clearing a hedge and water hazard. The foliage on the hurdle is a bit sparse, so it resembles a hedge only slightly.

LAMOINE BOYLE

per cent of the Giant stock for $49,000. In 1903 John T. Bush bought Freedman's holdings for $100,000, and in 1919 the Brush heirs sold a controlling interest to Stoneham for $950,000.

ADD RAY CALDWELL to the list of age-defying pitchers over whom Father Time is unable to gain a decision. He is 42 years old and has a son pitching professional ball but is still taking a regular turn himself on the slab for Birmingham in the Southern Association.

Ray Caldwell

Caldwell, who pitched for Senator W. D. Mansfield's McKeesport club in the O. & P. League in 1910 and was sold to the New York Yankees that fall, recently turned in one of the best games of the season in the Southern loop. He held the Mobile club to two hits and beat the Gulls, 3 to 2.

MINIATURE GOLF HAS a rival. It was born down South, where the Tom Thumb links game started, and it is in that section that it is being promoted most extensively, though the boys in Pittsburgh and elsewhere also have been playing it for some time on side streets and open lots. The game is on the order of baseball on a small scale and is called diamond ball. The bases are only 35 feet apart, instead of the regulation 90 feet, and a handball is used instead of a baseball. In Jacksonville, Fla., alone there are 42 diamonds in operation.

EVIDENTLY THERE IS no no slump in the enthusiasm of the boxing promoters in the Pittsburgh district nor in their confidence that bigger things are posible for the game hereabouts in its present healthy state. An increase in the number of operating clubs is promised not only for the remainder of the outdoor season, but also for the approaching indoor period.

First came the announcement that Francis Flynn will hold open-air shows on Friday nights in the Twenty-seventh Ward, North Side, where the amateurs have been holding forth, and will shift his cards to the Moose Temple when the weather is unfavorable. When a Thursday night Millvale show must be postponed, Flynn will let the Millvale club have Friday night to run it off and will stage his own show on Saturday night. That will make three summer clubs operating—Millvale, Flynn's and the Meyers brothers in North Braddock.

ON TOP OF that comes the news that at the conclusion of the outdoor season, the Meyers brothers plan to invade Pittsburgh with a small club for the winter. The location has not yet been announced.

Learning that the Meyers brothers plan to leave the Braddock field open for the winter, several Pittsburghers, headed by Lawrence McCabe, are taking preliminary steps toward opening a club in Braddock for the cold months. Flynn will resume at Moose Temple in the late fall and Jim McGirr will run in McKeesport, as usual.

John L. Hernon

MEANWHILE, MANAGER JOHN L. HERNON is getting ready to open Motor Square Garden for what promises to be the biggest season it has ever known. Prospects there will be made brighter by the number of smaller clubs operating, as the small clubs, making "naturals" and arousing new interest, are always helpful to the larger organizations that can put on more pretentious shows. So there is a chance that the coming winter will see boxing activities reaching record-breaking heights in Pittsburgh and vicinity, with five shows each week—Motor Square, Flynn's and Meyers brothers in Pittsburgh, McCabe in Braddock and Jim McGirr in McKeesport. That could hardly be surpassed anywhere in the country.

decathalon and the relays will rest up for the final round of competition Monday.

FIVE RECORDS FALL

Five records were pasted on the boards yesterday as the Olympic Club of San Francisco, directed by Percy Locey and admirably coached by Willie Hunter, wrested from the grasp of the Denver A. C. the junior team championship.

It took a third place in the final event of the day to enable the San Franciscans to break a 26-26 tie in points and forge to the front by two points to capture team honors. All afternoon, stars of the two clubs, closely pressed by the Boston A. A. entry, had struggled for the upper hand. Both had a man in the javelin, but the Denver entry faltered, and Clem Friedman, hurling the spear 191 feet 6½ inches, gathered himself a third place and his team the honors of the day.

One Olympic Club victor, Harry Carter, established one of the five new records that added zest to yesterday's proceedings. Carter raced over the two-mile course in 10:59.8, shattering the old mark, set 1928, by Franklin Osgood, of the N. Y. A. C. Osgood's time was 11:06 3-5 seconds.

The nine-year old record of Vernon Blenkiron, of the L. A. A. C. in the 100 was taken by the hind leg and tossed out of the park by Ralph Metcalfe, Chase Park A. C., of Chicago, Negro sprinter. Metcalfe's march to the title was a triumph from the first gun to the final breasting of the tape. He won his trial heat, his semi-final and the final, leaping away from the mark to take a two yard lead in the latter and leaping over the cinders in 0:09.7.

Ray Sears, of Mattoon, Ill., putting on a great stretch drive, showed his heels to the pack in the mile, and in doing so was clocked in 4.21 5-10, which simply ruined the mark set by the famous Lloyd Hahn back in 1923.

A young man from Lafayette, La., wearing the colors of the Southwestern Louisiana Institute, Johnny Morriss, skimmed over the 120-yard high hurdles in the very good time of 0:14.7, which sets up a new mark for the boys to pop away at in the future.

The oldest mark to tumble from its high place was S. P. Gillis' 24-year-old record in the hammer throw. Ed Flanangan, of the Boston A. A., heading a parade of his teammates who took first, second and third in the event, hurled the iron ball 162 feet, five inches for a new standard.

In scoring its team victory, the Olympic Club took down first places in the high jump and steeplechase; seconds in the 56-pound weight and the high hurdles; and third places in the steeplechase, low hurdles, 440-yard hurdles; shot put and the all-important javelin.

The lone Pittsburgher to win a first was Edgar Work, competing under the colors of the P. A. A., who ran a pip of a race to carry off the honors in the 440-yard hurdles. Len Friedman, Geneva College javelin star, turned up with a sore arm and failed to win a place in the event.

GRID STAR WEDS

CUMBERLAND, Wis., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Ray Richards, former Nebraska football star, now with the Frankfort Yellow Jackets, of Philadelphia, and Melva Dickinson, Omaha, were married here yesterday. They will live in Philadelphia.

CHRISTNER BEATEN

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Dick Daniels, Minneapolis heavyweight, won a 10-round newspaper decision over K. O. Christner, Akron, O., last night.

SARAZEN'S 142 LEADS FIELD

ORION, Mich., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Gene Sarazen is out in front of another golf championship parade.

The stock Italian professional from New York yesterday bounded two strokes ahead of a deadlocked field in the drive for the Western Open Golf championship with a par-breaking total of 142 strokes for the first 36 holes of the 72-hole stretch over the Indian Wood Club course.

Tied for fifth place at the end of the initial 18-hole round with a 73, the former National open champion flashed over the championship course with a pretty 69 yesterday that sent him ahead of the field and labelled him as the one man to beat in the 36-hole final today.

Deadlocked for second place, two strokes behind Sarazen, were five golfers of the long shot variety, who were not expected to cause him much trouble in the final sprint for the title. They were Harry Hampton, Chicago professional; Chris Brinke, Detroit amateur and former Kentucky amateur champion; Emerick Kocsis, young Detroit professional; Bob Shave, Cleveland, professional, and the veteran Al Watrous, of Detroit.

Tied for third place with a pair of 145's were another pair of dark horses, Johnny Watson, South Bend, Ind., professional, and Laurie Ayton, of Evanston, Ill. The rest of the leaders for the most part were figures well known in the world of golf. Densmore Shute, of Columbus, O., and Abe Espinosa, of Chicago, 1928 champion, had 146's; Horton Smith and Wild Bill Mehlhorn, of New York; Ed Dudley, of Wilmington, Del., and Charles Kocsis, of Detroit, Michigan state amateur champion, trailed with 147's. Walter Hagen came back to land among the leaders. The Haig, almost out with a bad 77, scored a par 72 yesterday, for 149.

PACKARD, CONNELLY WIN

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Jay Packard, of San Francisco, and L. L. Connelly, of Cleveland, yesterday won the first championships of the National Association of Scientific Angling Clubs in the three-eighth ounce accuracy and distance events respectively.

PEPPI BEATS MORETTI

HARRISBURG, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Johnny Peppi, of Philadelphia, last night won a decision over Gene Moretti, Atlantic City, in the 10-round wind-up of the American Legion boxing show held on Island Park here last night.

day, and he and his mates rode to a 10-to-3 triumph over the Braves. The Tribe jumped on French for two runs in the first round, but the youthful southpaw established himself and mastered the enemy from that point to the finish.

The Oaklanders came back with three runs in their half and were not headed at any time during the game. A couple of miscues by George Sisler paved the way for the Pirate attack of the first inning. The Rovers added two in the fourth, another in the seventh and then with two out in the eighth they put the game on the ice by scoring four times.

Tom Zachary, late of the American League and a southpaw of much skill, baffled the Buccos, but Tom was given very bad support. He eventually weakened, but the Pirates are treating many pitchers roughly these days. Bill Cunningham relieved Zachary in the eighth frame.

Walter Maranville went back to his shortfield post in the second game of the series. The fielding of the veteran was a distinctive feature of the contest.

BETTY NUTHALL, MRS. HARPER IN NET FINAL

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—Blonde and blue-eyed Betty Nuthall, England's darling of the tennis courts, makes her second bid for the American women's championship today.

The 21-year-old British girl enters the final round favored to beat Mrs. Anna Harper, of San Francisco, fifth ranking American player, and carry to England for the first time the title forfeited by Helen Wills Moody, winner of six of the last seven tournaments.

WINS EASILY

Miss Nuthall furnished the only thrill of the semi-finals by overcoming the spirited, hard-hitting opposition of the youthful American, Marjorie Morrill, of Dedham, Mass., to win in three sets, 6-8, 6-4, 6-2. Bounding Betty's superior experience, control and greater stamina saved the day for her after Miss Morrill, by the sheer force of her attack, had pulled out the first set and gained a 4-2 lead in the second.

Mrs. Harper, a left-hander, was offered no such keen opposition as she swept through the other semi-final match easily at the expense of the Baroness Maud Rosenbaum Levi, of Rome, Italy. The California woman won by scores of 6-2, 6-3, easily outstroking the former Chicagoan as she came from behind in each set to run out six straight games.

NOT IN DOUBLES

Miss Nuthall and Mrs. Harper also will be opponents in the final match for the doubles championship, taken to England last year by Mrs. Phoebe Watson and Mrs. L. R. C. Michell.

With little Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass., as her partner, Miss Nuthall scored her second semi-final conquest over Miss Morrill and Miss Penelope Anderson, of Richmond, Va., 6-2, 6-4. Mrs. Harper and Edith Cross, of San Francisco, emerged triumphant in a three-set contest with two young Californians, Marjorie Gladman and Josephine Cruickshank, 6-4, 2-6.

TILDEN REACHES NET FINALS

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 23.—(AP.)—With the national tennis championship just around the corner, Big Bill Tilden, who has dominated the American game for the past decade or so, yesterday advanced into the two championship rounds of the important Newport Casino invitation tournament.

He gained the title round of the singles play through the default of his doubles partner, Frank Hunter, of New Rochelle, N. Y. Both, however, gained the last round of the doubles play with an impressive straight-set victory over Jack Tidball and Gerald Bartosh, two steady California youngsters. The scores were 6-1, 6-3, 6-3.

Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., won the right to meet Tilden in the singles final by defeating George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-3, in the upper half semi-final.

Nick Altrock Says:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The Prince of Whales, Hack Wilson, is sure putting tacks on the home run king's throne. If Babe doesn't keep banging his scepter against the old apple, Hack will take it on the lope, with the crown jewels. Hack is sure the hero of Chicago these days, and when you're the hero of that town it's as good as wearing a bullet-proof vest.

Nick Altrock

It's quite a change from that last world series, when Hack was dancing around the center field with tears in his eyes and balls were rolling through his legs like he was a croquet wicket. The kid has sure come back with a biff and a bang this year.

PLAYOFF SERIES IS ARRANGED

By TOM BIRKS

A Homewood victory over Pleasant Valley this evening will cinch the second-half title in the City League for the first-named outfit. In the event Homewood is beaten, Dormont must defeat the Shoemen, first half victors, in the game remaining on its schedule to stay in the running. Arrangements for the playoff series between the seasonal victors were completed at a meeting last night, and Thursday, August 28, was set as the starting time, with the Olympia Park field, the Shoemen's home field, selected as the grounds. The second game will be played the next day at Homewood, the third at the Book Shoe field, September 2, and a fourth, if necessary, at Homewood.

Yesterday, Homewood lost to Dormont, 7-3; Stowe beat Thomas, 9-4, and Pleasant Valley and the Civics tied, 3-3, in City League contests.

MISS RAVIOR COPS SWIM

TORONTO, Aug. 23.—(AP.)—A distinct outsider, Margaret Ravior, of Philadelphia, splashed her way to victory in the 10-mile marathon swim for women, opening event of the Canadian National Exhibition yesterday.

Finding the waters of Lake Ontario much to her liking, Miss Ravior took the lead after eight miles and crossed the finish line nearly three minutes ahead of Mrs. Ruth Tower Corsan, of Toronto, former Denver girl, and with Ethel Hertle Gary, of New York, an outstanding favorite to win the event. Mrs. Gary finished third, nearly 20 minutes behind the winner.

Miss Ravior swam the rectangular course in five hours, 31 minutes, 39 1-5 seconds to win first prize money of $5,000. Mrs. Corsan's time was 5:34:31 2-5 and Mrs. Gary's 5:51:15. Second place carried a cash award of $2,500 while Mrs. Gary's share of the prize money was $1,000.

May Looney, of Warren, O., another outsider, won fourth place and $750; Anna Philler-Benoit, of Miami, Fla., won fifth place and $500 while the last money-winner was Irene Yurack, of Elmhurst, N. Y., whose sixth place entitled her to $250.

Local-Owned Horses Win at Waynesburg

Napoleon the Second, owned by Dr. George Seitz, of Swissvale, won the 2:15 pace in straight heats. In the stake for the 3-year-old trotters, Calumet Adella, a bay filly owned by E. J. McCarr, of Pittsburgh, after finishing last in the first heat, came back and took the second and third heats.

Kunold Presented Watch, Gold By Friends

Eddie Kunold, superintendent of the Schenley Park Golf Club clubhouse, was honored by friends last night, when he was presented a gold watch and a "bag of gold" in recognition of his 20 years of service at the municipal links.

Members of the Schenley Park family and Kunold's many friends surprised him by presenting him their tokens of esteem. He has just completed his twentieth year at the club.

FIGHTERS HERE TOMORROW

By JAMES MILLER.

Frankie (Kid) Anslem, Negro, flyweight champion of the 106th Division of the New York National Guard Armory, who meets Willie Davies, of Charleroi, in the main feature of the 10-round double windup, and Georgie Balduc, of Canada, Battling Gizzy's opponent in the other half of the twin bill, will arrive in town tomorrow to finish training for their bout at Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, Monday night.

Davies has lost no time getting in shape for Anslem. Willie has been up at a mountain camp for the past two weeks, working like a beaver. This is the tipoff that Davies expects a tough encounter with Anslem.

Charley Luck, Hickey Park matchmaker, is working on a good preliminary card to back up his Jackie Rodgers-Joey Thomas fight at Millvale, Thursday night.

Thomas won the right to meet the Negro knock-'em-dead star by defeating Johnny Dunn at Hickey Park last Thursday night. Rodgers originally was Thomas' opponent but a bad knee prevented Jackie from going through with the bout.

SPORT TIPOFFS

THE MASTADONS

That thud you hear every so often today is not a grapefruit tossing contest on the Hill . . . It's the hefties out at the A. A. U. meet flinging the discus and putting the shot . . . The total displacement of the field stars enrolled in the A. A. U. course in artistic muscle straining in The Stadium is nine pounds greater than that of the Majestic . . . Or the Homer Smith . . . We have with us Herman (Hoiman) Brix . . . whose classic pan is wrapped up in this kolymn . . . He won the shot at Denver last year and set a new record . . . 50 feet, 11¼ inches . . . The next group, reading from left to right and top to bottom is none other than Harlow Rothert . . . He was one of Pop Warner's bigger and better halfbacks last year . . . I saw him help put the Army team A. W. O. L. . . . He's a discus tosser and shot putter of great ability . . . That mastadon holding up the right section of The Stadium wall is Paul Jessup . . . An up and comin' youngster from Washington . . . Not Pa., not D. C., but Washington State . . . He won himself a fourth place last year in the shot . . . The Rocky Mountains offer the Clark boys, Dutch and Walter . . . Dutch was a pip of a football player and all-around athlete at Colorado . . . He's a "hammah" tosser . . . Then South California presents Jesse Mortensen . . . Any guy with a front tag of "Jess" is bound to be good . . . He plays halfback for Howard Jones' Trojans and hurls the javelin further than I like to walk . . . There are a flock of other good lads here, but they are all too hefty to get into this stuff today . . . Pere Locey, athletic director of the San Francisco Olympic Club, blows into town with a letter from Roy Cummins, of the San Francisco Call . . . Tells me it has a better collar on it in 'Frisco now than when we were out there last winter . . . It would [illegible] . . . Tomorrow . . . Mental Mumblings . . . Monday . . . Weber and [illegible]

DAILY TRUE STORY

[illegible] H. W.?

Hilary Ascott and Warner Ascott were cousins.

They neither liked nor disliked each other. They had nothing in common except the natural ambition to stand highest in favor of Uncle Hilary Ascott, and to marry Edna Garner.

Uncle H W had never married. He had aided considerably in the upbringing of the sons of his two departed brothers but even that didn't put the least cramp in his bank balance because the darn thing grew faster than he could deplete it.

If Edna Garner had been the age she was at this time when H W was 30 he would have married her but Edna was too young. H W thought she was just about perfection and he hoped that one of his nephews would marry her.

Furthermore each one of his nephews held the hope that he alone would marry Edna.

If Edna had any choice she never let it be known. Even H W in whom she confided almost everything had no inkling as to whether it was the bearer of his first or his second given name who stood highest in her affections.

"I like them both, H W," Edna said when he brought it up.

"But by hickory you can't have both of them, you know."

"I am afraid I am too old fashioned to want both of them."

"Naturally, naturally."

"Which one gives the greatest promise, H W?"

"You've got me there, Edna. Hilary promises to settle down and dig into his architecture that I spent good money for—his education in that line I mean. Warner promises to do great things with his scientific education that I also paid for."

"What do you think?"

"I don't think either one of them is worthy of you but I hope you'll marry one of them. They're as worthy as any other chaps and I'd like to see a young Hilary Warner Ascott toddling around before I kick off."

Fine Compliment

"We'll wait and see, H W. Did you ever guess that I'd rather marry you?"

"Sweet girl—fine compliment. If I were 10 years younger no nephew of mine would have a look in. But I know a lot of things including the fact that May and December aren't much of a matrimonial combination."

So Edna Garner and Hilary Warner Ascott waited to see which nephew would amount to something more than "promising."

They continued to putter around each in his own way. Hilary discussed some radical innovations in sky-scraper planning just as soon as he got around to opening up offices. Meanwhile, he dabbled mostly in polo, golf, speed boating and all-important branches of the world's play. Warner dabbled in his science. He had a laboratory, he fussed there, he messed around with tubes and smelly things, various kinds of "rays" and such and such, and the result was always "Not quite much of anything."

H. W. took Hilary to task.

"Why waste your time astraddle of toy polo ponies?" he asked.

"No waste, it develops a keen eye, quick muscles and good health, Uncle Hilary."

Then H. W. spoke to Warner along the same trend.

"No waste, Uncle Warner (each crafty nephew called his uncle by his own name for most obvious reasons). I am always getting on, experimenting."

When they were together H. W. said, "Why don't one of you marry Edna and settle down to something useful in this world?"

"Why doesn't Edna make a decision?" Hilary asked.

"My idea, exactly," Warner echoed.

H. W. related his latest conversation with the nephews.

"But I cannot decide yet, H. W.," Edna assured him.

"By hickory, know what I think?"

"Anything you think, H. W., will be something that has my approval."

"I think both boys are bluffers. I think that if they were on a tropic island they'd never do a thing to improve the place."

Uncle's Plan

"Why not send them there—if you can find such an island, and give them a year at it?"

"By hickory, Edna, I'll do it—I know just the island, an important one of a chain of islands I happen to control off the coast of Siam."

"And we'll give them a year, H. W.—we'll tell them we will be out to see what they have done in exactly a year and one month—and we'll really get out there in eleven months."

"What's that idea, Edna?"

"In a year and one month they'll be sort of prepared. They will hustle to make some sort of a showing in the last two months. By going ahead of schedule we'll catch them—find out just what they've done."

"Good idea."

"Just what might they do on this island?"

"I'm having a development, going to put in a breakwater and warehouses, making it a calling depot for some of my shipping. Now Hilary might work on that. And Warner might develop a better method of preparing copra or he might dig up some brand new commodity, with his scientific knowledge, something valuable from some waste—that's the German idea."

"They might," Edna agreed.

"But they won't, Edna—they won't. Hilary will make a golf course and do some speed boat stuff. Warner will probably analyze all sorts of flora and fauna and such minerals as the place affords and get nothing at all except some messed up test tubes."

"Poor kids," said Edna.

"Or," said H W, "I can settle a respectable allowance on them and let you look elsewhere."

"By hickory it wouldn't. If you married a chap named Jones or Smith, say John Henry Smith, it would be embarrassing to name your son Hilary Warner Ascott Smith—what?"

"Of course," Edna said, "you could marry me?"

"December and May, my dear."

Edna sighed.

H W also sighed.

Back at his big country place he held a conference with his nephews.

"Edna cannot make up her mind about you two young dawdlers," he said, "and you can't do anything except give promise of doing something later—away later. I'm going to help her decide."

Good Progress

"If it's anything like tossing a coin—"

"Or casting dice—"

"It's nothing like that. I'm going to send you to Grock Island."

Their uncle explained all about it, about his copra and teakwood and nacre business and how his 91-year lease of the island enabled him to use it as an important station for his shipping.

"You boys go out there and see what you can do to help me—each in your own way. You have free rein, plenty of funds, and Edna and I will be out in a year and a month to decide which one of you has made the best account of himself. Whichever it is will win Edna."

"Do you mean it?"

Hilary and Warner spoke almost in unison.

They went.

Hilary had changed the breakwater plans, had it built in a curve and was able to dredge and start a landing almost at shore, saving the cost of running out a 400-yard wharf.

Warner had amazed him, the representative, by applying X-ray to the pearl business. He X-rayed the pearl oysters, which enabled them to select those with pearls and cast the others back to grow pearls.

Both boys, the report said, had started to enrich Mr. Hilary Warner Ascott to a most amazing degree.

"By hickory, that's making it tough for you to decide, Edna," he said.

Time passed. The eleventh month arrived. H. W.'s private yacht, of almost liner dimensions, was being put in readiness for the voyage through the canal and across to Grock Island where H. W. and Edna would view the work of the boys so that a decision could be made.

Edna came over to Ascott Point, where H. W.'s 30-room summer "cottage" stood in 50 acres of ground.

Huggins, the butler, said that Mr. Ascott was on the west terrace, and added, because he had known Edna since she was a kid, "'E seems a bit disturbed, Miss Edna."

Boys Married

She saw H. W. pacing there, on the terrace.

He held a piece of white paper in his hand. Now and then he waved it, now and then he shook his fist to the west in a general direction of the Pacific and Grock Island. When she came nearer she heard him say "By hickory" three times in succession.

"When you do that, H. W., you are sure cussing," she called.

H. W. turned and faced her with a guilty expression. He jammed the white paper in his pocket. Edna came up and held out her hand.

"Might as well—but by hickory I'll—I'll——"

She took the paper and read. It was a joint letter from Hilary and Warner, and without going into all the verbiage it announced they had married the beautiful and charming and angelic twin daughters of Mr. George Nelson Digby.

Mr. George Nelson Digby was H. W.'s representative on the island.

Edna Garner did a queer thing—she laughed. She then did a few gleeful dance steps.

"H. W.," she said, "I'm the happiest girl alive. Tomorrow is your birthday and you are 49. You've been fibbing to me. When I marry I shall marry a man aged 49 and I suggest that you apply at once—then we could visit Hilary and Warner on our honeymoon. You know very well that ever since I was eight years old I have planned to marry you!"

"By hickory, Edna—"

He hesitated. The expression in her eyes did not call for mere words, it demanded embraces and kisses.

When Mr. and Mrs. H. W. reached Groak Island neither Hilary nor Warner were surprised.

"We knew all the time that Edna would land you," they said to their uncle.

FAMOUS RACKETEERS

True Accounts of Underworld Gentry Who Have Made Bad in the Big City.

Hymie ("Kiss and Tell") Giovanni.

Note—This is the second in an exhaustive series on Crime and Criminals, proving that Crime Does Not Pay.

OLD TIMERS in Aurora, Ill., will tell you that they do not remember Hymie Giovanni. Asked to describe his early boyhood, they will shake their heads and look the other way, pretending not to comprehend your questions. Abused and bullied, they grow more sullen and slink off down the street, muttering to themselves.

Never the less, Hymie Giovanni was born in Aurora, and taken at an early age to Chicago, where he lived the normal life of a growing boy—stealing coal and cursing policemen until he was 18 years of age.

It was then that he suddenly launched forth into the sordid world of desperate chances and ill-gotten gains.

Beause of his faultless manners and neat appearance, Hymie had no trouble in getting a city ordinance passed requiring that people beat their rugs twice a day. He then hurried around to the stores and bought up all the rug beaters. When law abiding people sought to purchase a rug beater the proprietor of the store would say, "See Hymie." Woe to the merchant who failed to thus direct business to the suave racketeer—the merchant, like as not, would get a swift kick, when, and where, he least expected it, and, turning, would see Hymie disappearing around the corner.

One thing led to another, until—

According to John S. Summer, of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, the law now regards books as improper if they have a tendency to "corrupt the morals of those whose minds are open to such influences."

Brief Comment for August Reading

Once more hope of having Pittsburgh supplied with voting machines in time for the November election is dissipated. Notwithstanding the promises made, the contract requires the manufacturing company to deliver only 70 by October 1, and it has until July 31, 1931, to furnish the rest of the 1,000 ordered. Clairton, Duquesne and McKeesport, preceding Pittsburgh in the alphabetical list of Allegheny County's cities, must be supplied before machines will be available for Pittsburgh polls. It looks as if we would again have to go through all the trouble that must be taken, when paper ballots are used, to prevent cheating.

And there still remains in the offing the threat of a suit by another bidder to nullify the contract on the ground that the successful company did not comply with the County Commissioners' specifications. One paragraph stipulated that bidders must submit a certified statement that the machines they offered had been in satisfactory service, with evidence as to when and where. This, it is charged, was ignored, and a machine contracted for that had never been given a satisfactory trial. What have the Commissioners to say to that?

Citizens will breathe a sigh of relief when the muddle is cleared and we at last get voting machines and assurance that they will function properly. The history of the movement to install the devices in Allegheny County has been, in recent months, a record of disappointments. And Allegheny County, notorious for election cheating, should have been first to get the machines, since the movement originated here in the efforts of the late Senator John P. Harris and was carried on by his brother, Senator Frank J. Harris.

It should be a source of considerable satisfaction to Pittsburghers that there is now an office of the State Highway Department in the city to which cases of automobile drivers unfit to drive can be referred. Probably everyone who has been operating an automobile for any length of time has encountered on the road motorists whose recklessness made them a menace. It has been felt that something ought to be done about it, yet there was reluctance to make information and it was felt that Harrisburg was too far away to write about it. The office opened here by Inspector C. C. Ferguson, of the Highway Department, offers a suitable place to which such complaints can be made. It should be of great assistance in clearing the roads of reckless and drunken drivers.

Good Housekeeping Magazine offers $5,000 in prizes for the best answers to the question, "Who are the 12 greatest women in America?" Pittsburgh has numerous women whose claims might be presented. "Who's Who in America" grants recognition to 10 Pittsburgh women—Mary B. Breed, Cora H. Coolidge, Luella P. Meloy, Hannah J. Patterson, Edith Oliver Rea, Anna P. Siviter, Elva S. Smith, Alice M. Thurston, Blanche K. S. Wappat and Elizabeth H. Wilkinson. But every Pittsburgher will think of many other women of our city who have attained distinction—in public life, Bertha Rauh, director of public welfare, and Judge Sara Soffel, for instance. It is not unlikely, too, that there are others, not very well known, yet truly entitled to be considered great.

Pittsburgh will entertain the 19th annual safety congress of the National Safety Council September 29 to October 3. It offers a splendid chance to arouse the people of Western Pennsylvania to realization that most accidents are preventable. The Safety Council has demonstrated that mishaps can be eliminated from industrial establishments. The railroads and mills have proved it by the great improvement in their accident records in recent years. The chief problem now is to reduce automobile accidents.

*Not the least interesting item in the report in re*gard to home-building that has been compiled by H. W. Correll, statistician of the Chamber of Commerce, is that showing the ratio between single-family dwellings and the others. Of 2,906 families for whom residences were constructed in Pittsburgh last year, 1,249 had buildings to themselves. It is gratifying that the city has not yet become so congested as to make it impractical for people in modest circumstances to have single-family dwellings. It is hard to think of a man's home as his castle if it is an apartment, or part of a duplex. When there are children it is especially desirable that the house should not be shared with other families.

The State Commander of the American Legion made a serious charge in his statement at the Harrisburg convention that disabled veterans of Pennsylvania are victims of "unfair discrimination" from the government, which, he declared, give preference to the disabled from New York and Illinois. Made in an official report, the charge cannot be ignored as a mere impetuous expression of opinion, not to be taken seriously. Every Pennsylvania congressman should take it on himself to inquire into the basis for the charge, and if convinced it is true, should leave no stone unturned to get fair treatment for the state's disabled veterans.

While most of us are motorists at times, either as drivers or passengers, we are oftener pedestrians; so it is gratifying to learn, on the authority of John M. Rice, of the Better Traffic Committee, that at intersections where there is no traffic control people on foot have the right of way. It really does not take so much exertion to apply the brakes and shift gears as some drivers seem to think, and there are not many who will be seriously inconvenienced by having to stop long enough to let walkers cross the street.

It is a rather remarkable commentary on Dean Inge's proposal that criminals sentenced to death be allowed to commit suicide that on the very day on which it was being discussed a prisoner at Warren, Pa., accused of first-degree murder, killed himself by kindling a fire in the jail and standing in the flames until fatally burned. Those who are bent on suicide are not particular how they accomplish it, so long as death comes quickly. Curiously enough, the least painful, least shocking and least grewsome method of ending one's life is rarely employed. But, after all, in cases of suicide or execution it is not the physical pain of death that is the important thing, but the mental suffering. Most persons who die in bed suffer more physical pain than those who commit suicide or are executed.

*Fayette County expects a reduction of 8,000 gal*lons a day in its milk production because of a new law, effective September 1, which requires that dairy barns be equipped in a manner that some dairymen say they cannot afford. They intend to go out of the milk business because of the requirements. If milk production is similarly curtailed throughout Pennsylvania the effect will be injurious. At the same time there will be no disposition on the part of the public to favor lowering of any restrictions that are necessary for cleanliness and sanitation.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

First Aid Runs Second

Rain has been a vital factor in the progress of man ever since Noah won that boat race by default.

"Bugs" Baer

The farmers have been looking upward toward the rain factory so long that they cannot get their necks back to see what's going on.

A senatorial commission walked through the parched valleys in rain coats and rubber boots. But they didn't fool anybody.

It didn't rain in June. And it didn't rain in July. There was a slight non-partisan drizzle in the middle of August and the Republican National Commission promptly claimed it on behalf of the administration.

It saved the crops. Not for the farmers. It saved the harvest for the middleman.

Wet or dry, all the clover kickers get out of the crops is the free and untrammeled right of every suburban detourist to assume another mortgage.

The drought was longer than an amendment. The result will be increased prices on foodstuffs and adulterants. We are told that eggs will be reduced nine to a dozen.

Now, what has rain got to do with the price of eggs? Nobody ever saw a hen drink water. It is afraid of ponds. And when it rains a hen throws itself into high gear and cackles swiftly away from there.

Suppose it had been the other way round? Instead of drought for 60 days, there had been rain on a longer promissory note?

The same results would have been tabulated on the merciless adding machine. The rain would have spoiled the same crops which were ruined by the sun. We must applaud the intelligence of mushroom farmers who raise their product in a dark cellar where commission merchants cannot find them without search warrants.

The answer to the whole scrambled works is that any excuse is a reason. When the speculators start out to gyp the public they bring their own marked cards. Why don't we declare the farms unconstitutional altogether and rely on canned goods?

Mr. Coolidge has already solved the problem of relief for the farmer by making his editorials shorter.

The administration could further the splendid work by eliminating the relief legislation and allowing the embattled ruralites to go back in peace to their checker games.

This is one year that we have all been relieved with the farmers. Let's all get together in one splendid spurt that will carry us over that last hill to the poorhouse.

MARINE POWER

By Archibald Henderson

In this age of power—of harnessing and controlling power—a vital consideration is to place in subjection to man new and greater sources of power than were ever known before. Two vast reservoirs of energy, which have scarcely been tapped at all, are: the sun and the sea. With the coal measures of the world being consumed at an alarmingly speedy rate, it is only a question of a very few centuries when this source of power will be entirely exhausted. Science must make adequate provision against the arrival of that now-dreaded day.

Sporadic and half-hearted efforts have been made to utilize the heat of the sun's rays as a source of power. While scientists readily concede the desirability and the possibility of accomplishing this, the plants already set up have not developed a sufficient amount of power in proportion to costs to justify them. This will perhaps continue to be the case so long as coal and gasoline and oil are abundant. Necessity usually forces the speeding up of the processes of invention.

The new plan, which has caught the imagination of the world, is the idea advanced by the famous French scientist, Georges Claude.

He is widely known in scientific circles as chemist, physicist and inventor. His name is associated with the discovery of neon light, used in the illuminated electric signs so common everywhere now. It has been said that, in developing the neon light, Claude created the dissolved-acetyline industry, which, as D. R. Barbee recently pointed out, produces every year 400,000,000 cubic feet of acetyline gas valued at $10,000,000. It is also claimed that Claude is responsible for discovering the principle of liquefaction of air, which gave rise to our present system of mechanical refrigeration.

It is well known that Claude invented the economical method for separating oxygen and hydrogen; and during the World War 30 of the apparatuses which he designed were installed at Muscle Shoals. The making of synthetic ammonia through the influence of high pressures is another of the useful discoveries of the ingenious Frenchman. This process has in it such possibilities that it has been taken over by the Du Ponts.

Claude's great idea, on which he has been working for "many years," is to develop power from the sea. Recently the apparatus which he had designed and had constructed, with the aid of the distinguished electrical engineer, M. Paul Boucherot, sank to the bottom of the ocean. This registered a loss of $1,000,000; and the disaster was due to no scientific defect in the apparatus, but failure to allow for the mighty force of the undertow.

The apparatus was a giant steel tube, exhausted of air. The interior of this tube was to be the theater of Claude's invention.

The invention has been explained by Claude: In the tropics, the surface water of the ocean is at a temperature of about 28 degrees Centigrade; the water at the depth of 1,000 meters (3,250 feet) is only 4 degrees Centigrade. Bring these two waters together and we can produce steam in a partial vacuum. Theoretically, this will do work equivalent to that of a waterfall 300 feet high. Motive power could be obtained at a price of about the rate furnished by the most favored waterfalls, and at the same time we could supply cold at a low cost to take the place of artificial ice. It will be possible to transform completely living conditions in the tropics.

The world watches this fascinating experiment with interest. New millions will be raised, another giant steel tube will be let down. The scientific theory is unimpeachable. Can the invention be made industrially available? Many scientists believe that it can.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Press your searchlight. Press it repeatedly. What happens? It goes dark. You've exhausted the battery—it no longer responds. That's a lesson in electricity. It's also a lesson in psychology.

Go into a prison. What do you find? Not what your father would have found—hardened, adult criminals. These slender bodies, huddled in cells, shuffling in the jute mill, are the bodies of boys. Eighteen-year-old murderers, forgers and thieves. Why are they here? Their bodies seem healthy. Their minds seem bright—amazingly bright. Then why should they have turned to crime? What has happened to Youth?

Talk to them and you'll make a discovery. Their bodies are normal, their minds are normal—but there's something wrong with their FEELINGS. Speak to them of football, airplanes, movies, automobiles, jobs and they'll talk your language. But speak of pity, reverence, responsibility, respect for property and you get no spark. Like your searchlight, they've gone dark. Why?

Compare your youth with theirs and you'll know why. How many Big Bangs did you have during the year? The Circus—Fourth of July—Sunday School Picnic—Last Day of School—Christmas. At most, half a dozen orgies of excitement in 12 months and none of it vicious excitement—yet even this few thrills gave your unripe young nerves tummyache and tantrums.

You peeved considerably at the dullness when you were a youngster, but now you're grateful for it. For it has left you emotionally sensitive. You can still wonder and shudder, weep and laugh, be moved by curiosity and pity and awe and respect. And it turns you cold to meet these sophisticated young criminals with their hard eyes. Yet how can they be otherwise?

Where you knew half a dozen hullabaloos a year, they live in a constant upheaval. Ever since they were born, their faculties have been under constant pressure. Noise has hammered at them, speed has hustled them, every known sensation has been hurled upon the sensitive film of their imagination. And nine-tenths of the stuff the youngster who lives in the squalid, cramped section of a city sees is cheap and vulgar if not actually criminal. Murder, theft, kidnaping, liquor, dope, all of these, in their hideous variety, are casual topics of conversation.

You wakened the family with your yells the night after you read Poe's first horror tale. And you were 14. But these babies were weaned on horror—carried in the arms of pleasure mad mothers before their eyes could even focus.

What happens when you hurl sensation at a youngster? The same thing that happens when you press the button of your searchlight. There is a response from a battery. Only in the searchlight the battery is a metal contrivance which gives out light and in the child it is a living gland which gives out energy and emotion. BUT THAT GLAND CAN BECOME EXHAUSTED AS SURELY AS THAT BATTERY. AND EMOTIONS CAN DULL AS WELL AS LIGHT RAYS.

Press a searchlight too often and you won't get any more light. Batter young nerves and glands too often and you won't get any more response. Why doesn't murder move these young city toughs as it would have moved you at 18? Why SHOULD it move them, when it has become an old, dull tale? And when horror and pity and reverence and respect are exhausted—like played out batteries—what's to keep a young human from going savage? Nothing. That's why they are there. And who's to blame?

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

Kids like animals, generally. And they often learn tricks from animals too. There was a woman that took her little five-year-old Bobbie to the zoo, and she caught him making terrible faces at a monkey. She says to him, "Say, Bobbie, that's awful! You're making a holy show of yourself. Didn't I often tell you not to make faces?"

"Well, mom, he started it," says the kid.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Like Twisted Trees

Some souls are warped by fear
And some by care
Through going, year on year,
With loads to bear.
Too weighty for their strength.
Life's storms take these
And rend, until at length,
Like twisted trees
That once stood, straight and proud
Against the sky
Some souls go bent and bowed
And shaped awry.

Yet, when such lives I find,
Full well I know
That, spite of winds unkind,
All trees that grow
Are striving to be tall;
Yes, every one,
Pine, cypress, willow, all
Would greet the sun!

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

True innovation is a quite different thing from the release of a recessive; the change is produced by an actual alteration in one of the genes, not by merely shuffling the old ones about. It is a genuine innovation, an enduring change in the germ-plasm, and it need not show the slightest disposition toward recessiveness under hybridization.

H. G. Wells

These little gene leaps that we call mutations are certainly one very important way in which the race changes. They are the normal ticks of the evolutionary clock. By mutations, now in this part, now in that, races slowly modify themselves.

The classical studies in mutation have been made with various species of that most convenient of insects, the fruit-fly. Every now and then, among hundreds of normal fellows, a "sport" appears. The novelty may differ from the rest in eye-color or in wing-shape, or indeed in the appearance of any part of its body, in length of life, in its reaction to light, and so on.

Often the same mutation turns up independently in several different stocks. Altogether in the course of this Drosophila work over 500 mutations have been carefully recorded. Thus every now and then the germ-plasm experiments and tries something new.

By skillful crossing it has been possible to pile together a great number of these mutants into a single strain. The resulting insects are amazingly unlike the "normal" parent type.

They look more like ants than flies, and it is highly unlikely that if an entomologist were confronted with specimens without explanation he would identify them as Drosophila melanvogaster. He would think them at least a different species.

There are many other well-established cases of mutation in domesticated animals. Among plants, maize and the garden flower called Primula sinensis, the Chinese Primrose, are classical examples; but there are plenty more.

It is of course impossible to observe mutations directly in wild nature, for one has no pedigrees and cannot tell whether a variety appears merely by shuffling of pre-existing genes or whether it is really a mutant. But there is every reason to believe that mutation is frequent in wild forms.

There are plenty of clearly demonstrated cases where wild animals and plants differ in characters which are inherited according to Mendelian laws, and which we may presume therefore to have arisen by mutation.

Thus the grasshoppers Paratettix and Apotettix of the Middle Western U. S. A. are found in an astonishing range of colors and patterns, all of which Mendelize.

In guinea-pigs and rats, the coat-colors of different wild species have been shown to differ by Mendelian genes. In pheasants and in snapdragons and primulas, where fertile species-crossing is possible, Mendelian species differences are also known.

Note that these mutations that we have been discussing, the Ancon sheep and the Florida velvet bean and the tobacco and the rest, all produce pretty considerable results.

They are rather abrupt jerks of progress. But all mutations are not like that. Some are so small as to be barely perceptible, and probably these are the commonest. An abrupt jerk will obviously stand more chance of being noticed by the human observer.

Occasionally in the course of very delicate expermentation such inconspicuous mutations have been recorded; Johanssen observed two in his beans, Castle saw some in rats, and quite a number have been found in the fruit-fly. Such minute changes are probably widespread in animate nature.

There may be an infinitesimal mutation in every individual. In a universe in which every known and observable individual thing is different, it is easier to believe that two separated fragments of germ-plasm are slightly different than that they are absolutely alike.

Thus, with apparent spontaneity through these greater and lesser mutations, the race makes its experiments. In the remaining sections of this book we have to see how, out of these mutations, the steady progressive changes of Evolution may be wrought.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—New York has an army of small salaried men who, becoming widowers, assume housekeeping burdens—holding down jobs and rearing children. Among social welfare workers they are "male mothers" and there are rich legends of their fortitude.

Their devotion is so great they refuse to permit offsprings to be taken to charitable homes. They try to work as near as possible so they can run in at every opportune moment and see how household affairs progress.

Recently in a tenement fire, the bodie of a father and six girls, the eldest nine, were found in the squalid two-room flat. He was a night watchman and for four years struggled heroically to keep his brood intact, sacrificing all in the attempt.

In such families the oldest becomes head of the house during the absence of the father. Sometimes it is a boy and sometimes a girl. They offer a tragic maturity, although merely children.

The "male mother" is up at dawn to get breakfast, help children dress and start them to school. He makes beds, sweeps and does other chores before going to his job. He returns to cook lunch and is home at dinner.

A social worker tells of one father who has not been out of his little flat after 7 at night in six years. In that time, too, he has not had a vacation, because vacations at his factory are without pay.

In the slums, neighboring women try to give a motherly touch to such homes, but are so work-worn themselves results are scant. A pair of stage dancing twins were brought up by a "male father," but he passed on before they won recognition.

A gentleman and wife have for six years taken an elevator in their apartment house for the street at about the same time. About five years ago they noticed if they got into a certain elevator at a certain time it was empty. A few minutes before or after it would be likely half filled or filled. Every now and then as an experiment they would try out the "empty hour" and the result never differed. They are moving but they've been a long time at it. I would be about in Morocco by now.

She walks in beauty, like the night
And so she should, the parasite

Incidentally, Hoffenstein is a poet able to live elegantly off book royalties. He resigned a well-paying post as press agent for Al Woods to experiment. His two volumes since then, "Poems in Praise of Practically Nothing" and "Year In, You're Out," have reached the sale of many best-selling novels. Unlike the popular picture of the poet with seedy raiment, long hair and flowing tie, Hoffenstein might model for a clothing ad. He swings a cane, th dude.

Berton Braley, too, is a Brummell bard save for an ancient h with a drooping brim that continues to withstand the hoots friends.

Of all poets, Harry Kemp in his Village days looked the minnesinger. He had acid wrinkles of hunger and could be an exuberant playboy or dreamy romanticist. He would suddenly vanish like a puff of wind and return in the same manner. Temperamentally and financially, he is the true poet.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Why tell so much about your family affairs?

The only persons interested in them are those who want something to peddle around.

There are men who upon arrival at work tell many things that should be kept within the family circle.

Usually it is something detrimental to some member of their family when they should desire to protect them in every way from evil reports.

In every establishment there are men whose errors, whose outbursts of temper, lack of interest and occasional unfitness are charged against their wives.

"He must have had another fight with his wife; she must be a hard person to get along with" is a fair sample of the sort of comment made by fellow employes.

Such men are looked upon with sympathy and that is what they were seeking and only the weak want sympathy.

He must be a pretty poor stick who would have outsiders think that his wife is not on ideal helpmate.

Wives have a great deal of influence upon their husbands, good and not so good, but unfortunately those who have helpful wives seldom speak of the fact.
